Over in Mifflin county their county home was closed several years ago by order of the Department of Welfare because it was considered bit exhibits, as the superintendent dependents were kept in homes in other counties and their keep paid for. Because this was deemed too expensive the Mifflin county commissioners built a new home, which was opened in January.

And now comes the surprising statement that the expenses for caring for the poor in their own county home has cost the Mifflin county taxpayers $6,200 more during the first seven months of this year than it did to keep them in homes in other counties, all of which shows that a county home is not a cheap place to maintain. The total expense for seven months was $30,750.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH IN FORWARD CAMPAIGN.

It is felt by all who have had anything to do with the summer school of religious education held last week at Central Oak Heights, near Milton under direction of the Evangelical church, that it was the most successful ever held. In all 175 students were registered, and 148 credits were issued at the recognition service. Over one thousand students are now enrolled throughout the entire conference in local schools.

The church has been engaged in a great constructive program there and will continue laying foundations for intensive religious revivals when the cooler fall months come.

Anniversary services at the Evangelical Homes in Lewisburg will be held on the grounds at the Homes today. The fortieth annual anniversary convention of the conference the day and there will be officials of Pine Grove Mills, was discharged branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, with special Ruby anniversary features, will be held next week, August 4 to 7. The girl's saxophone ensemble of the church orphanage will be one of the musical features.

One firm, the Oliver Equipment Co., with a branch establishment in Bellefonte, known as the Central Tractor and Implement company, is loads of machinery, which includes: a complete threshing outfit and something new in this part of the country—a grain combine.

Much of this machinery will be in actual operation, which everyone knows adds value to the exhibit as well as making it more interesting to the spectator in clearly illustrating its use.

One of the very complete and upto-date well-drilling outfits which has been doing such splendid work in Central Pennsylvania in bringing bountiful supplies of water to the surface, has been asking permission to give a demonstration on Grange Park and in all probability leave will be granted for the work. There is assurance that the hog and cattle barns will be filled with purebred stock which will comelargely from Centre county breeders, real home stockmen. One hundred and fifty approved type coops have of this department considered the growth warranted this expenditure in order to care for it properly in its development.

The plays being prepared for the evening entertainments by various Granges in the county, are making fine progess and promise even better things for this popular feature than has been heard in the past. The ball games will be conducted on a competitive basis and the teams. engaged assure a lot of vim and excitement to lovers of this sport,and who does not enjoy a good ball
