

CENTRE COUNTY MAN FLEEDED IN STOCK DEAL.

Orvis M. Fletcher, a native of Centre county, is a sadder but very much wiser man through the loss of $1500 he invested with a quartette of Philadelphia promoters in a corporation stock scheme they represented which is now claimed to be irregular. According to information from Lock Haven Fletcher met the men in that city. They were William M. Murphy, J. H. Gaunt, Edward F. Barry and C. K. Barnes, all of Philadelphia. The men claimed to represent a large corporation and induced Fletcher to invest in some of the stock which he did to the extent of $1500. This happened about a month ago. Lately he came to the conclusion that he had been fleeced and made information against the men. Two of them were arrested in Philadelphia, last week, and taken to Lock Haven for trial.

THE MINE WAS PARALYZED... BUT SKILLED SERVICE PUT IT BACK ON THE JOB

BEFORE the fire could be put under control generating equipment at the mine had been damaged beyond repair. A complete shut down was threatened—men must be laid-off for an indefinite period. It was the business of West Penn engineers to find a way out—to have the mine operating as quickly as possible—to keep the men employed.

To be sure, that meant building a two-mile transmission line. And it meant erecting a transformer station. But an organization of skilled workers was ready for any emergency. Trained and experienced engineers were available to check and test every step of the construction.

Night and day the work went forward. Two days after the breakdown the mine was in operation again. Miners who had been faced with enforced idleness were back on the job. West Penn people had again demonstrated, in the service they had given, their vital interest in the prosperity of the workers and of the industries in the territory served.

The pride you take in your home and your community is shared with you by the West Penn people in your territory. Every day... day after day... they are using their skill and experience... their training and foresight to express their pride of theirs in terms of dependable and uninterrupted West Penn service.
