RECORDER OF DEEDS

Scattered among the northern tier counties of Pennsylvania are fifty plants for the distillation of alcohol from wood.

Few people not conversant with the industry know anything about the wealth of commercial commodities that lie concealed in the birch. the beech and the maple.

It is estimated that the fifty plants in operation in Pennsylvania use 250,000 cords of wood annually. This represents the annual wood growth of 250,000 acres of forest land.

The greatest surprise to most people, in connection with this little known industry, lies in the variety of by-products that come from the distillation process.

The average yield of one cord of wood is 45 bushels of charcoal, 100 gallons of acetic acid or vinegar, 200 pounds of acetate of lime, 55 pounds of rosin, 4 gallons of solvent oils, 2 gallons of creosote oil, 10 gallons of fuel tar, and 10 gallons of wood alcohol.
