

TERMS—One Dollar and Fifty Cents per annum in advance; otherwise Two Dollars will be charged. No paper discontinued until all arrearages are settled.

Letters and communications, by mail shall have prompt attention.

NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

The NEW-YORK TRIBUNE, first issued in 1841, in its twenty-second year, has obtained both a larger and more widely diffused circulation than any other newspaper ever published in America. Though it has suffered in common with other journals, from the volunteering and departure of tens of thousands of its patrons to serve in the War for the Union, its circulation on this 6th of December, 1862, is as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Category and Circulation. Includes Daily, Semi-Weekly, Weekly, and Aggregate.

Presently a journal of News and Literature. The Tribune has political convictions which are well characterized by the single word REPUBLICAN. It is a Republican in its hearty adhesion to the great truth that "God has made of one blood all nations of men" - Republican in its assertion of the equal and inalienable rights of all men to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" - Republican in its every scheme and effort of the Slave Power, from the Annexation of Texas to the great Rebellion, to grasp the resources of our country for its own aggrandizement - Republican in its antagonism to the despots of the Old World, who fondly hail in the Paris saint calamities suddenly thrust upon us by their American counterparts the overthrow and ruin of the Model Republic - Republican in its hope and trust, its faith and effort that this atrocious Rebellion must result in the signal overthrow of its tyrants, and the firm establishment of equal rights and equal laws throughout the whole extent of our country - Republican in its hearty adhesion to Liberty and Union, shall in itself be "one and inseparable" henceforth and forever.

The Tribune devotes attention in other times, and to some extent in these, to Education, Temperance, Agriculture, Inventions, and whatever may minister to the spiritual and material progress and well-being of mankind; but for the present its energies and its columns are mainly devoted to the investigation and success of the War for the Union. Its special correspondents accompany every important incident of that great struggle and its consecutive triumph of the National arm and in the restoration of Peace and Thrift to our distracted, bleeding country. We believe that no otherwise can a fuller or more accurate view of the progress and character of this momentous conflict be obtained than through the regular perusal of our columns. And we respectfully solicit the co-operation of the friends of the National cause, which we regard and uphold as that of Universal Humanity, to aid us in extending its circulation.

TERMS. The enormous increase in the price of printing paper and other materials used in printing newspapers, compels us to increase the price of THE TRIBUNE. Our new rates are:

Table with 2 columns: Publication Type and Price. Includes Daily, Semi-Weekly, and Weekly rates.

Address THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Buildings, New-York.

When drafts can be procured it is much safer than to remit Bank Bills. The name of the Post-Office and State should in all cases be plainly given.

Subscribers who send money by Express, must prepay the Express charges, else it will be deducted from the remittance.

THE TRIBUNE ALMANAC FOR 1863 will be ready about Christmas.

Union Hotel, BEAVER, PENNA. ALEX. CLARK, PROPRIETOR

OSTER SALOON. Where the best quality of Oysters may be obtained during their season in any desired style. Families can be furnished with Oysters, by the can or dozen. The table is furnished with all the luxuries the PITTSBURG MARKET can afford.

Thankful for the liberal patronage heretofore bestowed a continuance of the same is respectfully solicited.

BEAVER ARGUS.

Vol. 39-No. 17.

Beaver, Wednesday, April 29, 1863.

Established 1818

From the 101st Reg P. V.

CAMP 101st Reg't. PA. VOLS. Newburne, N. C., Apr. 14th, '63.

At a meeting in the camp of 101st Reg't. Pa. Vols. Col. Morris in the Chair, Lieut. Col. Arrior and Capt. Compher Vice Presidents, and Lieut. Conley and Surgeon Rush Secretaries, the following committee, representing each county represented in the regiment, was nominated to draft resolutions expressing the feelings and sentiments of the Regiment: Mr. Taylor, Beaver; Lieut. Beagle, Bedford; Lieut. Lee, Cumberland; Capt. Clark, Tioga; Capt. Mays, Allegheny; Capt. Freeman, Lawrence; Lieut. Brown, Northumberland; Surgeon Rush, Lancaster; Lieut. Heppard, Philadelphia; and Capt. Banner Adams. The following preamble and resolutions were submitted and unanimously adopted by the regiment.

WHEREAS, Treason and rebellion, aiming at the destruction of our great and free Nation, having broken out in high over a large portion of territory in the United States, denying her authority, followed by defaming her proudest recollections, insulting and committing violence to her flag, we hastened to her rescue, to share her fate or redeem her at a sacred price; and WHEREAS, certain parties in the land of our homes, to which we ever looked for strength and comfort, have given us unmistakable evidence of a want of loyalty, by withholding their support from the Government, by denouncing alike the Executive and the armies in the field, giving aid and comfort to traitors, we deem it our duty to give to the world a free expression of our sentiments; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are now, as ever, unalterable in our determination to restore the Union entire, to break the coil of treason, to replace every stolen star on our insidious, yet glorious banner.

Resolved, That we have unbounded faith and confidence in the President of the United States, believing his counsels inspired by the Great Source of infallible wisdom seen in every act and proclamation.

Resolved, That, as true patriots, we support to the National Government, and his kind attention to the sick and wounded soldier, affording him, in many instances, the care of mothers and friends, with pain we contrast his acts with the peridious conduct of the late Legislature, which, in releasing by their vote, the hall of liberty to the cause of liberty, inherited unenviable infamy by defaming its proudest memories.

Resolved, That to oppose, under any pretext, the present Administration, charged specially with the restoration of the Union, is an alliance with treason, and whoever so opposes, shall be branded as a coward, and held in deeper contempt than the more active enemy in the field.

Resolved, That he who demands a withdrawal of the Union armies before the are crowned with success, by deploring our ability to conquer, offers an insult which we indignantly spurn; or by appealing to our privations and sufferings, thus giving traitors unopposed sway and dominion, is guilty of the foulest strategy filled with treason, such shall even be alike unworthy the respect of his countrymen, and the associations of the soldier of the bivouac and battle-field.

Resolved, That we hold it to be the duty of every loyal citizen to aid the President and his constituted authorities in every measure necessary to strengthen and conduct his armies in the field to a successful issue, and with humiliation and pain should we learn that any opposition shall be permitted to exist, unrebuked, in a loyal community.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the papers of the counties represented in the 101st Pa. Vols. MAJ. A. W. TAYLOR, Pres't. SURGEON D. G. RUSH, Sec'y.

The Conscription Law Explained and Defended.

Much has been said by the "copperheads," in reference to the provisions of the Conscription Act passed during the last session of Congress. One will lift up his bronzed head and say the provisions of the Act are oppressive to the poor, another will add that the Congress that framed and passed such a bill are traitors to their country, while the third one bitter than all others, will add, "yes, and hanging is too good for them." Every course is pursued to sour the minds of the public, and particularly the poorer class, and to accomplish this they talk of the Conscription Act as being oppressive to the poor.

It is one of the brightest Acts of the Thirty-Seventh Congress. In that law, is shown the humanity, justice and patriotism of that body, although they are accused of treason by the "copperheads," who care no more about the Government than though it were valueless.

For the purpose of showing clearly the intention of the bill, with reference to the poor class, we give the following letter, written to Fernando Wood by Senator Wilson, who was one of the framers of the bill, and who should, and does, understand it much better than those who denounce it, and allege that it is oppressive to the poor. He says:

Hon. Fernando Wood: Sir—You are everywhere recognized as the brain, the heart, the soul, the philosopher and guide of the Missouri Hall Democratic faction of the City of New York. Your restless brain inspires its utterances; your plastic hand moulds and fashions its action. Surely, then, it is fit that you should be held responsible for the utterances and acts of your liege clansmen who are wont to assemble in Mozart Hall and do your bidding.

Inspired by your counsels, Mozart Hall pronounces against the "Act for enrolling and calling out the National Forces," to preserve the Union, and "make an infamous distinction between the rich and the poor." Sir, this accusation is false, wickedly, wantonly and infamously false—a foul, shameful and damnable libel upon the law and its framers. The oft-repeated avowals of red-handed traitors, whose souls are stained with the blood of our murdered countrymen, that this accursed rebellion now upon us was forced upon them by the aggressions of the liberty loving people of the loyal States, are not more senseless, wantonly and wickedly false than is this declaration of Mozart Hall, that the Conscription Act makes a distinction in favor of the rich, and against the poor.

Pray, sir, do not misunderstand me. Of course I cannot mean to accuse Mozart Hall of intentional falsehood. Oh, no! Surely no one would suspect Mozart Hall of intentional falsehood or misrepresentation; its considerate moderation, its lively sense of justice, its admitted patriotism, its stainless purity of character, will rescue Mozart Hall from the suspicion of intentional misrepresentation or falsehood.

Of course, sir, this senseless accusation against the provisions of the Conscription Act was inspired by ignorance—not by falsehood. This exhibition of sheer ignorance concerning the provisions of this proscribed law of the nation will, perhaps, be excused and pardoned in view of the manifestations of that intense, passionate, out-spoken loyalty of Mozart Hall, which is wont to put forth in behalf of the government. It is, nevertheless, an agreeable spectacle to see you, sir, and your Mozart patriots whose exquisite regard for human rights is only equaled by that deep concern for the country which impels you to delve into the mysteries of negotiations along in utter ignorance of the provisions of a law framed expressly to more effectually defend the endangered nation, lighten the burden of the Treasury and the people, equalize the duties, and relieve, as far as possible, the toiling dependent poor from the hard, if not harsh, provisions of existing militia laws.

But, sir, it matters not whether this accusation of Mozart Hall against the Conscription Act was born of ignorance or falsehood. It is equally false, deceptive, mischievous. It is an accusation flung before the people by the reckless and demagogic tongue, to poison the heart and mislead the reason. Surely the heart's conscience and reason of a loyal people will mark and brand the brain that conceived the hand that penned and the tongue that proclaimed this foul, wicked and shameless calumny against an act which bears the amplest evidence in every line, that its framers intended its burdens should fall as light as possible on the toiling masses.

Sir, this "Act for enrolling and calling out the National Forces" was framed to be more efficient for war purposes than were the existing militia laws, less burdensome upon the Treasury and the people than were the existing statutes. These objects, sanctioned by patriotism, economy, justice and humanity, were ever kept steadily in view, and they were attained as nearly as the usual lot of humanly enacted laws, so fiercely denounced by your liege clansmen, could be. Yes, sir, this law, which thus discriminates in favor of the poor, is denounced and accused by Mozart Hall! Shame on Mozart Hall! Shame on the men who misrepresent the beneficent provisions of an act passed to uphold the cause of our imperiled country!

The 13th section of this Conscription Act provides that any person drafted and notified to appear as aforesaid may, on or before the day fixed for his appearance, furnish an acceptable substitute to take his place in the draft; or he may pay to such person as the Secretary of War may authorize to receive it, such sum, not exceeding three hundred dollars, as the Secretary may determine, for the sum shall be fixed at a uniform rate of ordering a draft for State or Territory. Any person may furnish an acceptable substitute to take his place in the draft at any price for which he is at liberty to furnish a substitute at such rate as he may agree to pay the substitute; or any drafted man may pay such sum, not exceeding three hundred dollars, as the Secretary of War may determine, to procure a substitute.

The sum determined upon by the Secretary cannot exceed three hundred dollars; it may be ten, fifty, one hundred, two hundred, or any sum within the limits of three hundred dollars. This provision of allowing a sum not to exceed three hundred dollars to be paid to the Government to procure a substitute was put into the law for the sole and single purpose of keeping down the price of substitutes, so that men of very moderate means and poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men, could more readily obtain substitutes. This provision which will be the price of substitutes, without this provision, it was believed that the price of substitutes would go up to one or two thousand dollars, so that none but rich men could obtain them. If any drafted man can obtain a substitute for a sum of three hundred dollars, he is not to be kept down the price of substitutes, and it must inevitably do so. Thus, the law, in its blindness and madness, perverts a measure framed solely in the interest of drafted men of moderate means, and of poor men,