We visited the room in the gevening before the assemblin	ing him into his defences immediately, around Richmond. Ho has proved the power of his noble army, which has not and never and its superior in the world. He has also proved the soundness of his military and strateg- ic views, by accomplishing what the rebels from the very beginning of the war, boasted never could be done.— The campaign now seems to be most extraordinary. For the first time during the war, Richmond is to be at- tacked from the South. The James river has been crossed without oppo- sition, by the grand Army of the Po- tomac. Petersburg will soon been be in our possession. All the Railroads reasing south except one are destroy- ed, and the entire military situation is literally revolutionized. The movement is a bold one, but it is by prudent and cautious boldness and daring that Grant has soon all his brilliant victories. It is said that Richmond is fortified impregnably or to East and North, but Grant has not sacrificed either men or time in as saulting it from the East or North.— He has tried the defences of Rich- mond before which M'Clellan remain- ed quietly for many weeks, and refus- ory of the mightiest forts on the con-	we have no doubt. Should the Gov. ernment fail to do so, it will be a vir- tual backing down, a concession to treason. Traitors would hereafter have no fear and treason would run riot. If evil war and bloodshed is to follow his re-arrest, let it come; better now than hereafter. We are prepar- ed, and have no fears of the issue. Traitors must be punished, treason of down, and the power of the Govern- ment be vindicated, no matter what the cost, the sacrifice, for the result. Presentment of Grand Jury .
