POETICAL.

FROM THE NEW YORK MERCURY.] In the Summer Long Ago. BY G. LEANDER EBERHART.

the days in which we wandered By the river's quiet flow, and o'er Love's bright pages pondered. in the summer long ago.

How, on his strong arm reclining, Round our hearts, who'll ever know, Love's sweet tendrils were entwining In the summer long ago.

Suret 15 buds the southwind kisses When the June's red roses blow, Were each day's unclouded blisses. in the summer long ago.

Till the dews in starlight glistened, For his footsteps, well I know, At the gate how oft I listened. In the summer long ago.

But rade war the nation started Into arms to meet the foe: And in tears, with him I parted, Three long weary years ago.

van the bloody strife is over, Some fond hearts with rapture glov In the embrace of hero-lovers, As in summers long ago.

lint, ah me. I'm broken-hearted! indmy tears shall ever flow for the brane with whom I parted. In the summer long ago.
