They say the "confounded old fool hasn't sense rough to keep the party's secrets, but blabs out all he knows, and does them more harm than good." We are essecially pleased that the 'boys in blue' were favorably egarded by the convention; and we doubt not that the fact that there was more than one of the nation's defenders candidates for the same office, was the only on why each of them were not ancressful. THE FOOLER CONFESSION : AGAIR,-It will be membered that a few days after Foger's confession ap-peared in the papers, a counter-statement was publish-ed by Mr. Moutgomery, in which he sought to break the force of Fogler's averments by charging them to jure the Montgomery family. Mr. Smith, the sheriff of Washington county, took personal exceptions to Montgomery's allegations, and is now gathering the evidence of them as failed of success, there is a good time comwith which to nail them to the counter. In the meanime he publishes the following card, which explains it (From the Washington Reporter.) (From the Washington Reporter.)

MESSES. EDITORS:—The Review & Examiner of the 22d ult., contained a lengthy article signed by Win. Montgomery, in which that gentleman, seeking to throw discredit upon the dying confession of Robert Fogier, who was executed only the week before, sets out with the bold charge that the confession was not the production of the deceased, but "was the work of several hands, and was gotten up for the purpose of injuring everybody who had taken any friendly part for the poor wretch who purposts to be its author." Mr. Montgomery follows this with a second article in last week's issue of the same paper, in a postscript to which, referring to the card published by the subscribing witnesses, he re-iterates the charge in the following words: "Of course those who got it (the confession) up ing witnesses, he re-iterates the charge in the following words: "Of course those who got it (the confession) up took the greatest care that the witnesses to the paper should know nothing of the manner of its concocting, lest, it called on as witnesses, they should be constrained to disclose the heartless compliancy. The paper was first gotten up by Fogler, and he transcribed it, and thus it was produced to those witnesses as his own."—It will be seen by this that Mr. Montgomery acquite the subscribing witnesses of all complicity in what he calls the heartless conspiracy against himself and family, but re-affirms the charge. True he names no person, but a mount of the production of Fogler dup ing his imprisonment, and as it is also well known that after his sentence only about half a flozen persons were allowed to see him, no one of whom was permitted to go to his sell without my knowing the object of the visit the plain and doubtless intended inference is that I must have had something to do with getting up the confession, of at least knew who was engaged in preparing it. Moreover, that I must have exercised some undue infinence over Fogler is plainly implied in the remark with which Mr. Montgomery sets out that those who arrested and hung the deceased are made the special object of his landation in the confession. Now noder these circumstances is it not my duty to repel these instantations? If I should remain silent will the people not naturally conclude that the charge made by Mr. Montgomery has some foundation in truth?—Occupying the position I do, I cannot afford to let his re-iterated assertion that the confession was conoccted for the deceased by others go uncontradicted. Relicated as a serious that a law on the present to do more than state my determination to clear myself of the charge, and produce such evidence as will satisfy the
