Carman agreed to take him Into his store, he felt that a good fortune was in his way.

"Let them correct their own mistakes." These words made a strong impression on the mind of. James Lewis. When first spoken by Mr. Carman, and with the meaning then involved, he felt, as we have said shocked; but as he turned them over again in his thoughts, and connected their utterance with a person who stood so high in his mother's estimation, he began to think that perhaps the thing was fair enough in business. Mir. Carman was hardly the man to do wrong. A few days after James had examined the bill, a clerk from the house by which it had been rendered called sor settlement. The lad, who was present, waited with interest to see whether Mr. Carman would speak of the error. But he made no remark. A check for the amount of the bill rendered was filled up and a receipt taken.

"Is that right?"

James saked himself this question. His moral sense said no; but the fact that Mr. Carman had so acted bewildered his mind. SOLE AGENT OF BEAVER COUNTY All other kinds of Trusses will be delivered in a snort time, when called for.

James asked nimself this question. His moral sense said no; but the fact that Mr. Carman had so acted bewildered his mind.

"It may be the way in business"—so he thought to himself—"but it don't look honest. I wouldn't have believed it of him."

Mr. Carman had a kind of way with him that won the boy's heart, and naturally tonded to make him judge whatever he might do in a most favorable manner.

"I wish he had corrected that error," he said to himself a great many times when thinking is a pleused way of Mr. Carman, and his own good fortune in having been received into his employment. "It don't heart had been seed the pain from which he was suited that the pain to agony.
