"Surely it must be near morning, for I don't feet a bit sleepy," said Terence.
"Morning!" echoed the other. "By the morthal, but it appears to me it's perpetual night they have in this part of the counthry."

In a few moments more they heard a knock at thedgor, and the travelers asked what was wanted.

"It's twelve o'clock!" answered the porton, opening the door and entering the room. with a candle in his hand.
"Aren't ye going to get up at all?"

"Only twelve o'clock!" exclaimed Terence.
"Why. I thought it must be as least five. What d'ye'mane by rousing us in the middle of the night? Do the people in these parts get up at breakfast time."

SEC. 14. Any assessor, election officers are always assent, we speak of independent, as we mean when we speak of independents. They are not in the way of learning it; and they do not care to learn it. The few villagers who are supposed to lead ill lives are spoken of below the breath, and carefully avoided without being critically studied. Many of the doves marry men whose work lies abroad; these quiet country houses being the favorite matrimonial hunting grounds for colonists and Anglo-Indians. So that some are always absent, whose healths are drunk in the traditional punch, with eyes that grow moist as the names are said. Doves are not disinclined to marry men who have to go abroad

For even the most adventurous among them are not independent, as we mean when we speak of independence in women. They are essentially homegirls, family girls, doves who cannot exist at all without a dovecot, however humble. The family is everything to them, and they are unfit for the solitude which so many of our self-supporting women can accept quito redgendily. Not that they are necessarily useless as breadwinners. They could work if pushed to it; but it must be in quite a womanly way, with the mother, the sister, the husband as the helper, with the home as the place of rest and the refuge. Their whole lives are laid in love and quietness; not necessarily
