They were both very nice persons, as you see? but it is doubtful if ever I should have found myself an anion of their temporary halson—that is to say their private appearments—but for their daughters in particular. Their mams were respectively Rose and Blanche. I never knew a rose in a family without a Blanche to follow. Rose was the elder. They were particularly unlike in personal appearance, as well as in joiner things. If Rose's hair was of the agreeable carrot color then in the height of its popularity, the locks of Blanche had the advantage of a chestnut hue, and would never go out of fashlon. We had all returned one evening from the Edablisament where danc-ing had been kept up until the lite hour of half-past eleven o'clock. I

I was not afraid of the major, nor of any man, but I trembled as I thought of the extent to which I was committing myself. She met my proposition with an expression of horror, and selzing my arm exclaimed in agitated tones; if the man you have to deal with. When roused he is desperate. Cool and pleasant as is his manner, reasonable as he is on general subjects, he is like a tiger when any man maker pretensions to the hand of either Blanche or myself; for he thinks nobody good enough for us."

enough for us."

The latter words were said with modest reluctance, and ought to have exacted some sweet rejoinder on my part. But it did not. My ideas were bent upon business. I could do nothing, however, but faintly urge the expediency of the course I had proposed, and fairly beaten in argument at last gave up the point. If a was afraid of anybody I was afraid of Rose. I could have sustained a pitch battle with the father; I surrendered to the daughter after a mere skirm-battle with the father; I surrendered to the daughter after a mere skirm ish. In short, the only position I was capable of defending being thus abandoned, I had no choice but to capitulate altogether; so after a little more persussion of a kind which is a very good imitation of force, I yielded, and agreed to the clopement arrangement, with a vague hope of something happening to provent it.

So determined was Rose mon running away that I found she had already taken two places in the Folkestone boat, which started at 8 o'clock the next morning; so that adopting the precaution of getting her boxs conveyed on board tha evening beconveyed on board the evening be-fore, she could, under the pretense of going out to bathe, manage to get off before being missed. What can the mere will of man do against such feminine resources as these?... The meeting with Rose alm med and wept upon my shoulder. The stitution was embarrassing; and I stover felt myself a greater imposter in my life than when I manstered up courage to give her a salute in return, telling her, however, at the same time, that she must retire to her room unless she wished to compromise herself with the garcon, who would soon come to collect the boots. The practical picture which I presented recalled her to herself. Snatching a ring from my finger, and pressing out of the difficulty. Maxwell, it suddenly occurred to me, to help me a ring from my finger, and pressing out of the difficulty. Maxwell, it suddenly occurred to me, to help me a ring from my finger, and pressing out of the difficulty. Maxwell was an intermediate of the world. He was still of the more than me another in return, she rush ed from my—or I should rather say her—embrace. The next instant her light foot was heard upon the stain each and I was alone in the corridor.

The moeting the next day was embarrassing enough—at least to me. Noboly basides seemed a bit disconcerted. The major and mamma were as usual. Not a word, not usign, in the easy bonhomic in the one case of the labored playfulness in the other. I blanche was frank and beaming as ever. Was she in bergisters seemed as ever. Was she in bergisters seemed as ever. Was she in bergisters seemed as ever. Was she in her sisters seemed as ever.

Therewas Roman man makety in the first was unprepared—One of the railway poticesman approached me, and putting his hand upon my shoulder, said, "Sorry to interfere, but orders by submarine; all the little was to make a charge."

Rose did not faint, but relieved her feelings with a burst of indignation which could scarcely have been expected from her affectionate nature. For my part, I had the greatest difficulty in concealing my satisfaction, and protested in such an equivocal way against the proceeding as to draw from the lady a withering in her had a solden idea seized me—a simple but mistority policy suggested itself to my mind.

"Of course we will dare anything; but before we take this extreme course I will speak to your father."

I will see him to night, and—and—perhaps I can linduce him to overcome his scruples, whatever they may be."

I was not afraid of the major, nor of any man, but I trembled as I thought of the extent to which I was lindered and processed in such an equivocal way against the proceeding as to draw from the lady a withering in her had the greatest differently in concealing my satisfaction, and protested in such an equivocal way against the proceeding as to draw from the lady a withering in her had the greatest differently in concealing my satisfaction, and protested in such an equivocal way against the proceeding as to draw from the lady a withering in her had the greatest differently in concealing my satisfaction, and protested in such an equivocal way against the proceeding as to draw from the lady a withering in her had the greatest differently in concealing my satisfaction, and protested in such an equivocal way against the proceeding a such is indeed the case.

Well they kept me at the railway station, which is a bore to be sure; but I was treated with all the distinction due to a wholesale embezzler, and the hardship was not very great. I was relieved from any annoyance: Rose was not allowed to remain with me. They had nothing to do with the lady, they said, who was free to go where she pleased. Her disinterested desire to share my captivity was, therefore, disappointed, and her sorrow had to find consolation at the hotel. I must confrest that I felt a row had to find consolation at the hotel. I must confess that I felt a sentiment of pity at this point, for I had no unfriendly feeling toward her. But a man is not bound to marry a lady merely to oblige her, and self-preservation is the first law of nature.

The night boat brought matters to a crisis—that is to say, it brought over Markwell, as companied, as I expected, by Honeymoon. My

My friend, as we shad arranged beforehand, had gone to the major and told him what he had done in the interest of the family to stop the runaway pair and that gentleman, as we expected, lost ho time in appearing upon the scene. His object, as he told Maxwell, was to take back his daughter from the beartless monster who it was a little too bad, when he heard this gracious announcement, revealing the nature of the plot off which I had been the victim. For it then became apparent, as was afterwards proved, that Rose's mysterious course of action had been dictated from the first by the family, and was intended, in the last resort, to bring matters to their present issue.

In this gracious announcement, reveal, can't you?

Wank. Stimmer has' now set in in good earnest. Monday was the longest day of the year, wanting only ten minutes of fifteen hours, and according to the old style of calculation, summer then really commenced. THE BRAVER SEGUE

Government has placed at their dis-posal for the purpose. It will con-tain over ten thousand cubic metres of gas, and is composed entirely of a cloth manufactured from caoutchouc which will allow of great expansion in the rarified strats of the atmos-phere. The seams thating the diffa-ent pleces form a total length of three English miles. The car is a marvel of strength and lightness. It is con-structed to carry the passengers, 4000 pounds of ballast, and provisions for a month.

A beautiful young lady, dressed as a Quakeress, entered the office of a prominent railroad official yesterday, prominent railroad omeial yesterday, and asked for a pass over the road, good for one month. She stated that she engaged in missionary work, and expected to do much good. The peculiar character of the work was explained, and, asking the young lady to be scated, the gentleman proceeded to fill out a passa requested. This was handed to her, but, stating that she could not read, she handed it back. The gentleman then read there was no doubt in the eyes of the authority of my identity with a fraudilent cashier of an English bank, in scarch of whom the London detectives were at that time on a visit to Paris. Of course the honesty which I have already mentioned as inscribed upon my countenance was to the police mind an additional ground of suspicion. It is a maxim, I believe, in the profession that the man they want? is always the least likely as an as appearance is concerned, of any number in a crowd, to have committed the offense. I could not help thinking, by the way, that it is very easy to arrest people upon false charges by electric telegraph; and such is indeed the case.

Well they kept me at the milway station, which is a bore to be sureput. I was treated with all the distinction due to a wholesale embezzler, and the hardship was not very great. I was relieved from any, annoyance: Rose was not allowed to remain with me. They had nothing to do with the ladesing to share my capitivity was, therefore, disappointed, and her sorrow had to find consolation at the

An Eighteenth Century Editor. Mark Twain in one of his rambling etters draws the following picture: Cannot you fancy the ancient editor of the Connecticut Courant of a hun-dred years ago, in round Ben Frank-lin spectacles, wig and cue, lace cuffs, coat pocket flaps like a cellar door, long waistcoat, knee breeches, stock-ings, low quarter shoes with buckles on them like a window sash—a man gravely culling "news" three weeks old; and "per latest advices" about Colonel Bouquet's forces having cross-ed the river at Pittsburgh fully thirty days gone by; and thrilling ru-nors of war from Madrid, London, Versallies, Stockholm and the Ha-gue, with the mildew of four awful Maxwell, was to take back his daughter from the heartless monster who had betrayed the confidence of friendship, and robbed him of the hope of his house. Markwell confessed afterward that he was puzzled at this expressed determination, but accepted the position, as in consistency bound. The major, however, was too much for us—Ladmit it in all humility.—He had changed his mind during the passage, and so far from taking back his daughter, he determined to leave her with me.
