OUR NEW VOTERS.

In a few observations we have al ready made on the probable certainty of the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution, carly next year (1870,) thereby conferring the right to vote in this State, on all citizens of the United States, we estimated the number of colored voters at about fifteen thousand. This, on reflection, we are satisfied is not too high an estimate. By the census of 1860 there were in the State 56,949 colored men, women and children. Of these, 26,473 were male, and 30,-476 females. Of the males, 13,623 were over twenty years of age, and it is but fair to presume that the number who will vote at the next October

The Enlargement of the Eric

We referred briefly a few days since to the importance of enlarging this canal, from Beaver to Lake Erie. We suppose our readers are generally aware that the construction of this canal was undertaken by the State canni was uncertaken by the cover thirty years ago. The whole amount expended by the Commonwealth upon it and damages allowed were nearly $4,00,000. The work wasstill unfinished when the financial embarrassments of 1841, '42 and '43 caused the Commonwealth to abandon nearly all its branch canals. The work remained in that condiwhen the Eric Canal Company was organized to complete the same. The Commonwealth transferred its unfin

The elements entering into these calculations have been claborately examined in New York in the contest between the canal and the railtest between the canal and the rall-ronds. One enlargement of her great canal has been completed, and anoth-er still greater is proposed. The two great natural channels of commerce are the northern lakes and the Ohio river. one in Western Pennsylvania. To Pittsburgh manufacturers cheap transportation is a question of life and death. To Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania Railroad cheap transportation is equally wital. They recognize this in undertaking the new enterprise of a cheap freight line of railroads. The great staple products of Pennsylvania can alone be developed by cheap transportation. The entire State is, therefore, interested in the completion of this work.

We might even put it on high national grounds. In case of war these internal lines of traffic should be all opened. In case of a possible these internal lines of traffic should be all opened. In case of a possible war with England, this would be the shortest and cheapest access to Cana-da, her weak point. The amount saved in one campaign would build the work half a dozen times over. Washington. The lines leading from the army pussed through his office.
The singularity of these dispatches, and the fact that only these came from the army, attracted the Superintendent's attention. Instead of permitting them to pass on to their permitting them to pass on to their destination, he quietly took them to the Socretary of War. The Secre-tary took them to the President in indignation and demanded Butterfic

The President sent for the Secretary of State, who had always been Butterfield's friend and backer, and showed him the dispatches; and announced his determination to act upon the recommendation of the Secretary of War. Mr. Seward begged that extreme measurers be not resorted to. "He is a young man," plead the venerable Serretary, "and has been inveigled into this crime by the Wall sixeet speculators.
