Crawton was charmed, and seemed unconscious of all around him save the sweet cadence around him save the sweet cadence of music and song, until a young man approached, leaned over him and whispered a word in his car which brought him suddenly to his fact. They were friends, and had been from early youth. Crawton had often spoken of the young man, and also of another, equally dear to him, who he was that night quickly informed, was at Paris, dying of a wound received in a duel. Dalton—that was the name of the young intruder upon our musical entertainment—had hurried to London by rebe Shatturn, which Crawton immediately. So saying, he arose and left the theatre, I began to suspect that Crawton ment mischief, and regreted I had allowed him to depart. I of the spent seven weeks in the great city most agreeably; and we might have stayed longer but for a circumstance which caused us to proceed at once for Paris, and which, also, constitutes the begining of a chain of circumstances which blasted the life of a noble youth, and furnished the material for this story.

Our evenings while in London were generally spent at the opera. Crawfon, like most artists, was extremely found of music, and would sit for hours like one enchanted while listening to the master productions of Donizetti Rossina, Mozart and other celebrated composers. On the hight previous to our departure from London we were listening intently to IP Arlina mi rammentati in the "Bolical and lick the saying, he arose and left the theatre, I began to suspect that Crawton ment mischief, and regreted in had allowed him to depart. I became very uneasy; still I kept mp. There could be no mistake. Just as I was wondering how it could be possible for Crawton to paint so perfect a likeness of the man, he appeared in the box, and by the side of Mons. De Shatturn. I saw him address this is an intruder. After the two men had exchanged a few words I saw Crawton slap words it is aw Crawton shaped to the master productions. I never before experienced such deep feelings of concern and regret. We proceeded in silence to our hotel—both of us seeming to understand each other's feelings. Words in such both of us seeming to understand cach other's feelings. Words in such that such other's feelings. Words in such that the honor of my friend would not permit any effort to avert a collision between him and the sorely offended De Shatturn, and my deep affection prevented any desire, inclination, or power on my part to aid and abet in the matter. I knelt that night and prayed that the threatening calamity might pass away. An appeal to heaven seemed important papers which required the signature of the unfortunate youth, in order to place his widowed mother in possession of property without which she would have been left destitute. By good fortune Dalton had stopped at the same hotel where we manner, time, and place of the eight make. The morning came bringing the challenge from Mons. Oh, dear, dear! to think that you, margaret, should have married a city in a fairy fulle; and here I am planted for life, plain Mrs. Hiram Parke, and nothing to compare with you. And one of these two women had eyes to see, ears to hear, and a heart to feel and appreciate it all. She was a tall, stately lady, apparently some thirty years of age—not exactly handsome, but with a grace of air and manner peculiarly her own. The careful tollet, the nameless air of elegance and luxury, the pale cheek and soft white hunds, betrayed the city dame. While the weary glance in the large, dark eyes, which even the pleasant quiet of the sunset hour could not quite drive away, showed that Time had not dealt gently with her and her heart's idols, but had thrown them, shattered and ruined, at her feet.

At present the pretty face was almost spoiling by a querulous, discontented expression. She was contrasting her own hand, plump and small, but certainly rather brown, with the slender, white flingers of her city friend, all glittering with fewels.

"Just look at the two," she exclaimed. "That comes of making butter and cheese, and sweeping and dusting

SOLAR PHENOMENA.

Not long since, a pargraph went the rounds of the papers, which an-nounced the fact that a column of fire had shot from the sun toward the earth, and that, glowing with such heat as to break the glasses of the tel-escopes astronomers directed to it, it was steadily advancing to the neigh-borhood of our unlucky planet.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE ERIE

Wm. W. Reed/ esq., Superintendeut of the (Pennsylvania) Eric Canal, has published an exhaustive communication in the Eric Dispatch communication in the Eric Dispatch on the canal enlargement question, in which he sets forth; with the formidable array of facts and figures, the complete feasibility of the project, as well as the great advantages that must result therefrom. Mr. Reed has had charge of the canal for eleven yeurs, and therefore are his views in the premises especially valuable.

After showing that the scarcity of water in former wars was not caused posed to the same temptations. Thank Heaven that you have him as he is, a good, true man, who loves you; and never mind the butter and cheese Jenny, so long as your own happiness and his is made up with them."

She rose from her seat as she spoke and strolled down the garden path alsone.

Jenny did not follow her. She sat on the step, lost in thought. The riddle of her friend's life was at last made clear to her. She had often wondered why Margaret in the midst of all her wealth and liking, should seem so sad and liking, should seem so sad and liking, showon the other of a man who has no love for you! What 'lower deep' act there be for a proud and sensitive woman?

Jenny turned with tears in her eyes to meet her handsome, stalwart husband, as he came from the field.

"Well, little woman!" he cried, and then she got the rough embrace and the hearty kiss for which she was looking.

Yes, Margaret was right! The butter and cheese were of very little consequence, while love like this made her tasks easy to endure!

And the rosy-cheeked little woman bent fondly down over her "Hiram", as he flung himself on the porch seat, and fanned him, talked to him, brought him cool lemonade, and weather, averaged over six millions cubic feet of water for the lockage, leakage and evaporation of the pres-ent cunal, of which there was used

The present canal is about fifty feet at the water line, which it is proposed to increase to seventy feet, adding four-tenths to the width; but thirty-three miles are slackwater that do not require widening, and as the canal is built on sloping ground and without berme banks, the water sets back in pools and wide waters, except in through cuts, and nearly one half of the canal has a water surface of over seventy feet. This will reduce the average increase in width of water line to two-tenths, and increase the evaporation to that extent.

The leakage of locks is in propor-

The leakage of locks is in proportion to the lift, and, as it is not proposed to change the lifts of the locks, there will be no increase of leakage from that source. The only other increase would be in scakage, which will be small and more than compensated for in the increased total three of
