The Democratic papers during the late campaign, were wont to twit Mr. John Covode about his spelling, but when the campaign ended they made the important discovery that his jugaring had been remarkably accurate. Just now the Treusury ring papers of Western Pennsylvania are twitting General Irwin on his bad spelling, and publish a letter—which they ullege he wrote to one A. G. they allege he wrote to one A. G. Henry, in proof of their charge. These latter, as in Mr. Covode's case, we have no doubt realize by this time that if General Irwin is not much on spelling and grammer, he is not predictions in this same Henry letter, shows them that much at least.
