EDUCATIONAL. BEAVER COUNTY CONTINUED. GREENE. -There are nine frame school buildings and nine schools in this district. There are three very fine school houses, comparatively new, which reflect much credit upon the township-the others should give way to more modern in this district; others, again, that cer-tainly did not meet the expectations of the patrons. A want of zeal, interest nergy, ambition, enterprize, &c. was suits should have been accomplished. In

There was an educational atmosphere in the community that had a tendency to dampen the seal and chill the efforts of the most conscientious edu entors; I beg leave to advert to some of them; and then in this, and subsequent articles, endeavor to attract public attention to a clearer conception of our com mon school system and our duty toward the schools. A want of appreciation of our school system was perceptiblelonging, metaphorically speaking, for the flesh-pots of Egypt in the adminis tration of school affairs was apparent—an expression that school officers were aucratic in their powers, and that the peo ple were subjects of a species of scho lespotism, was heard;—these things, together with a jealousy existing among teachers themselves, and a disposition t

It is gratifying to remark, however, that the great mass of the people entertain for our schools and our school system the most profound respect, and are earnestly laboring for their advancement and prosperity. That our school system is fault. less no one will say. That the practical workings of our schools, in all their de tails, are what the friends of popular education desire, no one will assert. Against any exclusive managem the schools by the Church, stand the rights of the State on the part of the con munity not in the Church, and of parents in the Church who may wish better ad-vantages for their children than the Church schools offer. We come now to the right of the State

The State is a divine institution equally with the Church, though for a differen purpose. If, to preserve its existence and to maintain its best character, the Church has a certain implied and Godgiven right to educate its children, then for precisely similar reasons the State has a right to educate its children equally implied and God-given. The family en-tors into both alike, and both must cowork with the parents to educate the children. No prosperous State -and least of all a republic-can be based on ignorance, which always debases mind and heart, and makes men the victims and the tools of tyrants. A republic, which is the self-rule of the people, demand a common school system as essential its being, and still more to its well-being. It was the very instinct of liberty which led our fathers to establish schools for universal education. Hence the State must make definite provision for edu-cating silits children. But in doing this it must be remembered that its work is co-ordinate with that of the family and the Church, and must refrain from an iuringement of their rights. The State ust act in good faith for the moral and ntellectual objects common to all learning to supplemental parental and Church > our common school system be perpetuated, and without that system republicanism will be periled, if not destroyed Now, having shown that it is not only the right but a duty, on the part of the State to educate its future citizens, in order that its institutions may be per petuated and the principles of free gov ernment firmly established, I proceed to ask: What provision has the State made
