SELECT POETRY.

SOME ONE'S SERVANT GIRL.
She stood there, leaning wearily
Against the window frame,
Her face was pale and sad,
Her garments coarse and plain;
"What is the story?" asked a friend,
"The red lips give a faint
"Really, I do not know her name."
"I have been her master."
"With her hair so black and bright,
Her face so sweet and patient still,
"Amid the bustling throng,
She had a certain grace and style,
"Tending with watchful care
For her bright hands to be
"A man, I thought a gentleman,
"Sweeping the basket from her hands,
"And he who was so sweetly
"And the boy who whistled,
"Felt to be a gentleman,
"To some one's servant girl."
"Ah! well, it is that God alone
"Looks upon the heart,
"And he who is so sweetly
"And the boy who whistled,
"Felt to be a gentleman,
"To some one's servant girl."
"Ah! well, it is that God alone
"Looks upon the heart,
"And he who is so sweetly
"And the boy who whistled,
"Felt to be a gentleman,
"To some one's servant girl."

THE FACTS IN THE GREAT LAND-SLIDE CASE.

BY MARK TWAIN.
It was in the early days of Nevada Territory, the mountains are very high and steep about Carson, Eagle and Washoe valleys—very high and steep, and so when the snow gets to melting off in the Spring and the warm spring earth begins to melt and soften, the disastrous land slides commence. You do not know what a land slide is, unless you have lived in that country and seen the whole area of mountain taken off some fine morning and deposited down in the valley, leaving a vast, level, unbroken plain upon which the mountain's front to keep the circumference fresh in your memory all the years that you may go on living within seventy miles of that place. General Bancombe was shipped out to Nevada in the invoice of other goods, and he was a very able Attorney. He considered himself a lawyer of parts, and he very much wanted to be a lawyer in Nevada. He was partly for the pure gratification of it and partly because his salary was so much better than that of a lawyer in the States. Now the older citizens of a new territory look upon the rest of the world with a certain contempt, and they are very particular to keep out of the way—when it gets in the way they snub it. Sometimes this snub takes the shape of a practical joke.

One morning Dick slides rode off to Nevada, and he was a very able Attorney. He considered himself a lawyer of parts, and he very much wanted to be a lawyer in Nevada. He was partly for the pure gratification of it and partly because his salary was so much better than that of a lawyer in the States. Now the older citizens of a new territory look upon the rest of the world with a certain contempt, and they are very particular to keep out of the way—when it gets in the way they snub it. Sometimes this snub takes the shape of a practical joke.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

GOING DOWN HILL.
"That looks bad," exclaimed Farmer White, with an expressive shake of the head, as he passed a neglected garden and broken down fence in one of his walks.
"Bad enough," was the reply of his companion.
"The neighbor Thompson appears to be running down hill very fast, I can remember when everything around his place was trim and neat."
"I have a pair of boots on my feet, and they are a good service."
"I have generally employed him," said the other, "and he is a good workman; but nevertheless, I believe I shall step into Jacob Smith's this morning and order a pair of boots, which I stand in need. I always make it a rule never to patronize any man who appears to be running down hill."
"There is generally some risk in helping those who don't help themselves."
"I believe it is time neighbor Thompson and I came to a settlement on our short accounts long friends."
"No time to lose, I should say," replied the first.
"Indeed I have your heart of my neighbor White?"
"I have heard nothing, but a man who uses his eyes, you understand, and I never trust any one with money who is evidently going down hill."
"Quite right; and I will send you my bill this evening. I have only delayed on account of the sickness of my man here in his family all winter. I suppose must have run behind a little, but still I must take care of my own business."
"Speaking of Thompson, are you?"
"I observed a bystander, who appeared to take an interest in the conversation, "Going down hill, is he? I must look out for myself, then. He owes me quite a snug sum for leather, and he has not paid me for another month's credit, but on the whole I guess the money will be safer in my own pocket."
"Four or five worthies separated, each with his mind filled with the affairs of neighbor Thompson, the party who had been going down hill, and the best way was to give him a push."
"In another part of the village similar scenes were passing.
"I declare," exclaimed Mrs. Bennett, the dressmaker, to a favorite neighbor, "no one has to do with her from the window, whence she had been gazing on the passers-by."
"If there is not Mrs. Thompson's husband coming up the steps with a parcel in her hand, she wants me to do her work, but I think it better to venture. Every one says she has a chance if ever I get my pay."
"She has always paid us promptly."
"True; but that was in the days of her prosperity. I cannot afford to run any longer."
The entrance of Mrs. Thompson prevented any further conversation. She was evidently surprised at the remark of Mrs. Bennett, and she looked for her, but as great pressure of business was pleaded as an excuse, there was no more to be said. Mrs. Thompson took her leave. Another application proved equally unsuccessful. It was made and suitably become. On the way home, the poor shoemaker's wife met the teacher of a small school in the neighborhood.
"Ah, Mrs. Thompson, I am glad to see you," was the salutation.
"I am glad to see you, Mrs. Thompson," was the reply.
"Our account," was the surprised reply. "Surely the term has not yet expired."
"Only half of it, but my present rule is to collect my money at any time. It is a plan which many teachers have adopted of late."
"I was not aware that there had been any change in your rules, and I have made arrangements to meet your bill at the usual time."
"I am glad to hear that, but I must look to my power to do so."
"I am glad to hear that, but I must look to my power to do so."
"I am glad to hear that, but I must look to my power to do so."

THE BEAVER ARGUMENT.

When the General sat down, he held his head upon his hands, and he was a very able Attorney. He considered himself a lawyer of parts, and he very much wanted to be a lawyer in Nevada. He was partly for the pure gratification of it and partly because his salary was so much better than that of a lawyer in the States. Now the older citizens of a new territory look upon the rest of the world with a certain contempt, and they are very particular to keep out of the way—when it gets in the way they snub it. Sometimes this snub takes the shape of a practical joke.
