Mr. Morrissey stopped and asked not made a mistake. "I guess not I am going in," replied Casey with a tremendous oath. Mr. Morrissey caught him by the collar and told the bruiser he could not be admitted. The belligerent Casey was handed over to the officers and confined in the lock up until after the races. But for the shrewd forethought of Mr. Morrissey some five hundred thieves would have flocked upon the track if Casey had gained admission.

longs to the second class, and the following brief description is equally applicable to both arms: The machine gun consists of a cluster of barrels, either bound together or bored out of the solid, and mounted on the same principle as an ordinary fieldgun. At a few hundred yards, indeed, it would be difficult to distinguish between these weapons, as far as outward appearance goes. To the barrel is attached a massive breech action, capable of being opened and closed by a lever.

In the Montigny arm the cartridges are carried in steel plates perforated with holes corresponding in number and position to holes in the barrel. This steel plate, in fact, forms the central fire cartridges being dropped into the holes in the steel plate, stand out at right angels from it, and the plates, thus ready charged, are so carried in limber and axletree boxes specially fitted for their reception. When the gun comes into action the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech is drawn back, a steel plate full of cartridges is dropped into its corresponding slot, and the breech block thrust forward and secured. The gun is now on full cook, and contains from thirty to forty cartridges, which are fired by a "barrel organ" handle, either one by one as the handle works round click-clack, or in a volley by a rapid turn of the wrist. When the gui is empty the wash there is organ withdrawn.
