"Lucy "
"Yes Mr. Wilder said he guessed she'd better, and brother Parker plead hard for it. He thinks she's old enough to get religion, and ought to have II, and her pa says there's no harm tryin', only he won't have her flustered. I don't know what to say the said to the men folks. Don't it look ought? old enough to got religion, and ought to have II, and her pa says there's no harm tryin', only he won't have her flustered. I don't know what to say 'bout it myself, but I guess pa's right,' And Mrs. Wilder ended with a little

"Mr. Parker!" There was a concentrated and conspicuous snull in Draxy's voice. She said no more, and in another minute got up and left the room, her errand accomplished. There were few waste places in Draxy's life: Satan might have dodged around fier for months without finding one idle chink on which to practice his nefarious arts.

Tretty soon the door opened and Lucy came in—a girl of seventeen, with the shy beauty of a wild doe in lier hazel eyes. The delicate cameo like outline of her face was full of an expression of appeal. Not that there was anything to appeal against in her life, the potted only daughter of this honest home. Some women possess that look naturally, and before it, when combined with youth and loveliness, the hearts of men go down like nine-pins. Lucy as yet knew not the value of her dower, but, such knowledge never lingers long.

"Where have you been, dear?"

Now, then, for the dice, gentlemen.

The dice were brought on and the shaking commenced. There were three dice, and each player was entitled to three throws. Of the first ten throws, thirty-nine was the highest number cast. The eleventh turned up forty-two. Then theiscores fell again till the twenty-first throw, when one of the gamesters threw out forty-tine.

The crowd was now alf excitement. Forty-nine was a hard point to beat. The lowest number that could be thrown was nine—and the highest—and nine sixes was fifty-four, making what is called an average throw; about thirty-one and one-half. Of 100 throws the majorly will fall below thirty-two.

Again the dice rattled in the box of the ivory cubes. Fresently the first throw was made.
