The benediction was pronounced by Rev. A. H. Bowers; after which the procession returned to the Court House, where it dispersed; highly pleased with the entire programme of proceedings.

The soldiers of the Post of the of proceedings.

The soldiers of the Post of the Grand Army escorted Capt, Winans' company—than whom there is not a more richly uniformed one in the State (all picked men, and as fair a specimen of America's sons as can be found in the same number) to the upper end of Beaver, where after a salute given and returned, they took presence, soldierly conduct, and sympathy with the spirit of the occasion.

It is well the day has not been made by law a public holiday. The spontaneous expression of feeling welling up from the hearts of the people to commemorate with flowers and wreaths the graves of their fallen sons in the cause of their whole country, is more like a family and fireside fortivel, then it would be were it. try, is more like a family and fireside festival, than it would be were it made the subject of special enactment. The hearths are few where the memory of one lost in battle is not a frequent guest. The organization of soldiers under whose auspices "the list observance of this day was made, and whose skillful management has brought it to so successful an issue, has been especially fortunate in keeping the simple and touching ceremonial free from every taint of partizanship." On each successive year the ceremonies have been more widely and more favorably observed, until now the day has taken permanent rank beside the anniversary of our Independence as a national holiday.

Long may its observance continue.

In the first place, I see these representatives—girls and boys, who are under the tender care of our State, which originated with the predecessor of our worthy and distinguished Governor, and successfully carried out by him. This State has taken better care of the children of those who fell as defenders of their country than any other State in the Union. Then I see before me this beautiful monument, erected by you, fellow-citizens of Pittsburgh, in honor of those who fell in the sacred cause, many of whom were my personal friends; and when I see this monument before me, my heart is addened with the recollection of their noble qualities, and what their country.
