For Delegates at Large to the National Convention.

The S. L. Dupin Election.

In his classification of papers gives the following result: Of the Democratic papers, which advocate a straight out nomination by the Convention, it names 11; of those that speak well of the Cincinnati ticket, but await the action of the Democratic Convention, 11; those that support the Cincinnati ticket to the support of the Democratic party it enumerates 62. Since its publication, there are nearly as many more of the second and third classes.

On last Saturday evening when the returns of the primary election were being brought in, Dr. Sharlock appeared with the vote of Burlington township. He announced it as follows: "J. S. Hutten, 73; John F. Dray, 64; but do not even stir the crowd in which it was uttered, for it neither provoked a smile nor a frown in the ranks of the voters. The very fact that Dr. Sharlock could speak of a man whose shoes he is unworthy to touch, should itself satisfy the people of this county, that they not only did right last fall in electing him for the legislature, but that they committed a great wrong in ever sending him to Harrisburg at all. They will not be likely to repeat the wrong.

GEN. SHERIDAN ADVISES THE WAR HOSTILE INDIANS COLLECTED NEAR FORT BERTHOUD, who have declared their intention to oppose the progress of work on the railroad this summer. They have torn up the stakes planted by a surveying party in the Powder River country. When the railroad company shall have pushed their work to the west side of Missouri, the Indians contemplate concentrating their forces to a general hostile movement in mass against the companies. They number among their leaders the following well known hostile Indian chiefs: Setting Bull, Black Horn, Iron Dog, Horn Horn, Four Horns, and Long Dog. These Indians are well armed and equipped.

A BILL, now pending in the Senate of the United States, looking to the establishment of industrial schools for the orphans of soldiers and sailors. It is of the simplest possible form, and is confined to creating a "body politic and corporate," with power to hold property, to transact business, and to sue and be sued. It is the leading incorporator, the other names are unfamiliar. The work is an excellent one, and it does not involve the slightest expense to the country, it ought to pass. Indeed, the country could do no more just and proper thing than to aid pecuniarily an enterprise, rightly guarded and conducted, which would give an honorable means of earning a livelihood to any soldier's children.

The U. S. Senate, on the evening of May 20th, after a continuous executive session of more than nine hours, by the requisite two-thirds vote advised the President to negotiate an additional article to the treaty of Washington on the basis recently proposed by the British government, though in a form somewhat different from it, but in all other respects, the amendment being designed to secure an obligation on the part of both governments without detriment to either, and without placing the United States in an attitude of hostility to the British government. The motion of the Senate on that occasion was kept more than ordinarily confidential, and the subject had been placed under additional obligations of secrecy; but there is no reason whatever to doubt the truth of the foregoing statement. The President and Secretary Fish were officially advised of the action of the Senate, and a telegram was sent by the latter to Minister Sherman, acquainting him with the facts, for the information of the British government. It was expected that on Monday last a response would be received from London, when the Senate will ratify the additional article to the treaty.

The House Amistad bill passed the vote on the 22d inst., and has been passed by the President and is now a law. It provides that all political disabilities imposed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution are removed from all persons except Senators and Representatives of the 39th and 40th Congresses, and officers of judiciary military and navy services, and of departments and foreign missions of the United States. The number relieved by this act is estimated, by well informed persons of capacity and experience since the close of the war, have been barred from all participation in county, state and national politics. The passage of this bill will dispose of a great number of cases now pending in the United States Supreme Court, and in the District and Circuit Courts, where information has been furnished to persons holding office, contrary to the provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. One of the most important of these is that of the Hon. A. G. Nicholson, ex-United States Senator, and Judge of the Supreme Court of Tennessee. This case has been carried to the United States Supreme Court, and will be reached, probably next Winter, but, since the Amistad bill has passed, the Attorney General will, without doubt, enter a quod pro se in this and all similar cases. The District Attorneys throughout the country will also probably be instructed to take the same action in regard to similar cases in their courts.
