The Way it was Done in Phila-

The Age makes mention of the following incident as a speciman of the manner of conducting the election: We have already called attention to the case in the Sixth division of the Tenth ward. There the officer appointed by the authority of the United States Supervisor of Elections, ventured to perform his duty by challenging a "repeater," who was voting in the name of a wellknown citizen. For this the United States Supervisor was dragged from the precinct house by the Deputy Marshal of the United States! It appears from this statement that "The" Allen gang made the most money and voted the oftenest. Next to his gang, in the magnitude of their operations, were those under the manipulation and management of the custom house officers. It is unpossible to accertain how many of these repeaters were taken on from this city, but one of the conductors on the railroad between here and CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.
