SELECT POETRY. THE STRANGER ON THE SILL. Between bload fields of wheat and corn, Is the lovely home where I was built. The peach tree leans against the wall, And the woodbine wanders over alt;
There is the shaded doorway still;
But a stranger's foot has crossed the ail. There is the barn, and, as of yore, can smell the hay from the open door,

And see the busy swallows throng, And hear the pewee's monraidisting; But the stranger comes, oh! paining proof His sheaves are piled to the heater reof, There is an orchard-the very tree Where my childhood knew long tours of ease, And I watched the shadowy moments run Till my life imbibed more shads then sun; The swing from the bough still sweeps the air. But the stranger's children are swinging there

Twas there I found the calamia pot, And watched the mianows poise and shoot, And heard the robin lave his wing-But the stranger's bucket is at the spring. O! von who daily cross the sill, Step lightly, for I love it still: Then think what countless harvest shower Have passed within the scented deor. l'o gladden eyes that are no more:

Deal kindly with those orchard tises, And when your children crowd your knees, Their sweetest fruit shall they impart, As it old memories stirred their shart; As I old memories surred near the property of the large of the port still leave the large.

And in sweet reversues hold the start.

The barn, the trees the brook, the bids.

The meadows, with their towing fixed.

The woodbines on the cottage the large of the large My heart still lingers with them all: Ye strangers on my native silk.
Step lightly, for I love it still.
