A TOUCHING STORY.

The following affecting narretive was given by a father to his son, as a warning derived from his bitter experience of the sin of resisting a mother's love and counsei:

What agony was on my mother's face when all that she had said and suffered failed to move me. She rose to go home and I followed at a distance. She spoke to me no more until she reached her own

She looked astonished at my boldness, but replied firmly: . .

"Certainly you will, Alfred! I command you."

"I will not," said I, "you can't get me

"One of the two things you must do, Alfred-either go to school this minute or I will lock you up in your room, and keep you there until you promise implicit obedience to my wishes in the fu ture."

"I dare you to do it," I said, "you can't get me up stairs."

"Alfred, choose now," said my mother, who said her hand upon my arm. She trembled violently and was deadly

"If you touch me I will kick you," said not what I said!

"Will you go, Alfred?"

"No," I replied, but I quailed beneath her eyes.

"Then follow me," said she, as she grasped my arm firmly. I raised my foot -"O, my son, hear me"-I raised my foot and kicked her-my sainted mother. How my head reels as the torrent of memory rushes over me. I kicked my mother, a feeble woman-my mother. She staggered back a few steps and leaned against the wall. She did not look at me. I saw her heart beat against her breast. "O, Heavenly Father!" she cried, "forgive him, he knows not what he does!" The gardener just then passing the door, and seeing my mother was pale and almost unable to support herself, came in.

"Take this boy up stairs and lock him in his room," said she, and turned off from me. It was a look of agony, mingled with most intense love; it was the unutterable pang from a heart that was Just at twilight I heard a foot-step approach my door. It was my sister.

"What shall I tell mother for you?"

she said. "Nothing," I replied.

"O, Alfred, for my sake and for all our sakes, say that you are sorry. She longs to forgive you."

I would not answer. I heard footsteps slowly retreating and flung myself on the bed to pass a wretched and fearful

THE WINGED MAN.

Faglin, the Bird-Man of Auvergne-Singular Story.

Paris has a Revue des Marveilles, and if all its articles are as startling as a recent contribution from the pen of Mr. Harnois Condamine, it certainly has good claims to the title. This gentleman has discovered actual evideuce of a new departure among the human race by which a man is eventually to take to himself wings and fly through the air. The application of "It is school time now," she said. "Go, faith in the Darwinian theory of the selec tion of species to the phenomenon that Mr. Harnois Condamine describes is al that is necessary to forecast an ostrich like creature as the coming man, half-striding, half flying through the world. The addition of wings to women will, of course, make them angels instead of ostriches. It was in the mountains of Auvergne that the embodiment of the first evidence of the new departure was discovered. His name appeared to walk as much with his arms I in a fearful rage, God knows I knew | Abnormal developments were found, and the old fellow recognizing at once the of a wing, according to these gentlemen. One of those is a very distinctly marked, though rudimentary third eyelid; the other is a loose and flappy mass of skin that tunate affair. folds back of the arm when this member is at rest. These additions indicate rapid advances in the process of developing the new species that is promised. This process would naturally be gradual, and take its slow course through marriage and offspring. It is claimed that the strength of the muscle required for flying is not near so great as has been estimated in the past, and that elasticity is quite as important an adjunct. The developments that have been noted are of particularly elastic dualundertake the education of this child. probably for the purpose of bringing it up as it should fly.

tunnel as an engineering job of some magnitude, but there is another work of the kind in contemplation which, if completed, will reduce it to the second or third rank, in point of size. The James river and Kanawha canal, now partially completed, is to pass under the Allegheny mountains, the proposed tunnel for the purpose being over eight miles in length. The engineers estimate the cost of the completion of the work at thirty seven million dollars.

Railroad Earnings. The receipts from earnings of nineteen of the principal railways of the country exclusive of the Pennsylvania, for she month of January last, aggregated $7,-398,263, against $7,191,812 from same roads in January, 1872, an increase of $106,451. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, covering in its operations a very large area of territory, does not get its returns in and examined as early as do roads more limited in their operations. There is no doubt much more of line of railway in January of 1873 than there was in 1872, and the increase naturally should have been greater than is shown, and would have been but for the severity We are apt to look upon the Hoosac of the weather, greatly interrupting traffic and travel.
