

HISTORY OF THE BEAVER VALLEY.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette. BEAVER VALLEY, April, 1873. [Paper No. 12.] FALLSTON—EDUCATIONALLY AND SPIRITUALLY.

In the year 1833, "Fallston Academy" was built and dedicated for school and religious purposes, throwing open wide its doors for all who felt called to instruct the people intellectually, or in the principles of religion. It was free to every denomination, without respect to creed or forms or ceremonies, and answered well the purposes for which it was built. Here for years, the lion and the lamb lay down together in the most absolute peace and quiet—that is to say, the Presbyterians and Methodist lion and the Quaker lamb. No persecution for opinion's sake under the roof of that building, but it is fairly presumable that while the lion and the lamb were at peace, that the lion was more or less at war with himself.

Did you ever see an old style Methodist and true "Blue stocking" in a "Deer" tunnel? Put a couple of those worthies together at that day, and the effect would be similar to that of steel on flint; the fire would fly, indeed it means business. No doubt if the good old building, whose cupola yet points it out to every passer by, could relate its own history, it would tell us stirring stories of the good old time, when the "Final perseverance," &c., caused many a hotly contested literary warfare, between the said Calvinist divine and the impulsive Methodist itinerant.

Those days have passed, but we have the old academy yet. From its walls, the irrepressible youth of the town have gone forth to battle the world, and wrest from it, whatever there is of good in it for them. To-day the sharp notes of its bell brings under discipline many a boy and girl who is ignorant of the cherished history of this goodly old building. Two years later, the Beaver River Gazette was established and published by Dr. R. B. Baker. This was probably the second paper published in the county, the Argus having been established in 1818—and at that period was not, of course, so pretentious an appearance or so well patronized, as the valley papers of to-day. Dr. Baker was succeeded in the paper by E. K. Chamberlin, who, after carrying it on for a while, transferred it to the Rev. Mr. Winter, who seems to have published it until 1838, when it came into the hands of Judge B. C. Chamberlin, who carried it on in Fallston during 1838 and 1839 as the Beaver Falls Union. After this it was removed to New Brighton, which was becoming the prominent town of the valley. With an academy and a newspaper, I presume the people felt intellectually and morally safe, and possibly do yet, as in the lapse of years they have added nothing and lost the newspaper.

Signs of business life. In 1835, a saw mill was put in operation by Charles Lukens and L. Townsend, which was continuously run until 1864, when it was completely destroyed by fire and was succeeded by a new one. In the year 1835, another lined oil mill built on the north end of the race, by John Pugh & Co., which was run for some years and then changed into a tub manufactory.

In the following year, near the upper end of the race, there was built a manufactory for making sash, which was run for a time and afterwards used for the manufacture of washboards. This industry was kept in occasional operation until very lately, but is now a thing to be numbered with the past.

In the same year, upon the site formerly occupied by Blanchard as a scythe manufactory, there was erected a manufactory for buckets and tubs, &c., by Messrs. Miner & Co., and was operated until within a few years, by this and succeeding firms. It is now entirely discontinued. In the year 1837, Richard Moreland succeeded D. Townsend in the manufacture of lined oil, which he carried on for some length of time. He built a flouring mill at the lower end of the race, which was run for several years by John Edgar, Esq., and was sold by him to Messrs. Sager & Co., who are now operating it. Up to this year the only means of crossing the river between Fallston and Brighton, was by a rope ferry, which served the commerce of the town for many years, but the increase of business and the influx of business men and their workmen, soon rendered the ferry inadequate to meet their wants. In 1837, a fine bridge was built between the two towns by Messrs. Lathrop and Le Barron, which has done duty since, but might be of much greater service to the people were it free from the toll system.

An historical note. In September, 1841, the store of James Duncan was brought into being, which soon monopolized the business of Fallston, and contiguous neighborhoods became a feature of interest in the place. We find in "Historical Collections," a notice of this village about this period, that pointedly shows the great amount of business done in it. "This place is situated along one or two streets, at the foot of a high bluff, and is famous for its manufactory, which consist of woollens, cottons, paper, lined oil, wire, scythes, buckets, window sash, plough, carpets, laths, carding machines, steam engines, &c. The water power here is immense; a race is permanently constructed, a mile and a half in length, which conducts the water upon which a long row of manufacturing establishments is erected. There is a respectable building of brick for schools and for public worship. In the hill behind the village is an abundance of excellent coal, which may be slid from the mouth of the pits into the yards of many of the houses."

The head of steamboat navigation was at one time at Fallston, or terminus of the falls of Beaver. To render this practicable, a dam of fifteen feet was erected by the State at the mouth of Beaver, at which there are locks sufficient to pass through boats. But this has long been abandoned, and the only relic of that time is seen in the canal boats, the "toot" of whose horns, is a mournful reminder of the good old days of navigation to the foot of the falls; even the canal boats have seen their day, and under the fiat of the great railroads, we will soon be left to the tender mercy of the "Iron horse." But little progress has been made in Fallston, since the time referred to. It is true that we have manufactories now in existence that did not then exist, but they have only taken the place of others. The manufacturing of oil, cottons, scythes, tubs, washboards, sash, paper, buckets, ploughs, carpets, &c., has now entirely ceased, some of them for a great many years. In their stead, we have foundries, machine works, nail works, handle works, kegs, extension of wire and rivet works and of the keg works with mills, &c.

There is no cause for gloom or despondency on this account, however, as the industries of the town were never in a more flourishing condition.

The population of the town to-day is about 700 people, mainly connected in some way or other, with the various manufactory of the valley. They compose a very industrious and well behaved community.

The situation of the town in its full length, is a very pretty one. The business part of it is located at the base of a hill, sloping very abruptly to the top. The lower part of the town is on a beautiful flat, on the bank of the Beaver, running back several hundred feet, and upon which there are several very excellent residences, and room for more. From this flat a fine view is had of parts of the Valley, and especially of the more prominent parts of New Brighton. An elegant picture is formed of the pretty residences on the different table lands of New Brighton, which gradually slope backward from the railroad to Block House Run beyond. No town in the Valley is more evenly balanced in point of room for business and residences than Fallston. Were all its available manufacturing ground used for that purpose, there would still be ample room for residences for the proprietors and workmen, and that, too, out of reach of the smoke and dust. It ought to have a population of at least 2,000 people, with their workshops and places of business right at their doors. The present business of the place is something as follows: A good flouring mill located at the end of the bridge, under the charge of some of the best flouring men of the Valley. The foundry of John Thornley, Esq., which was founded in the year 1836 by Thomas Thornley & Son, and has been in operation ever since, now employs five hands, and manufactures the "Great Republic" stove, various kinds of hollow ware, and engines. Near to it is the machine shop of M. Darragh & Co., employing about ten hands; formerly had a foundry at this place, but it was discontinued in the year 1862.

A large saw mill, owned by Messrs. Miner & Co., employs several hands and does a large and good business. Immediately above this is the lead keg factory of M. T. & S. Kennedy, reference to the commencement of which has already been made. They employ twenty hands, mostly boys, and under the good management of the gentleman running it, it has become one of the most beneficial factories among us. Adjoining the keg factory is the woolen mill, operated by Jos. Pontefract, doing a very fair business, and must increase. The demand for yarns in the stocking manufactory in the Valley will give Mr. Pontefract's factory a good run. The firm of W. P. Townsend & Co., now carry on very large the wire and rivet manufactory, already mentioned as started by R. Townsend & Co. Messrs. Townsend employ about twenty-five hands, capable and efficient workmen, and are putting on the market a superior quality of wire and rivets. This wire needs no eulogy from any quarter, as their work has spoken for them and given them a fine reputation. Above this is located the building formerly used for a washboard factory and recently purchased by Mr. Job Fanner as a nail machine shop. Next in order is Phillip's Handle Manufactory, now employing some seven hands and doing a fine business. This is a comparatively new business in Fallston, having removed it from New Brighton. The upper buildings on the race are now occupied by the Standard Horse Nail Company, a new manufactory and not yet fairly got to work. The firm has already been mentioned in the Gazette as being composed of some of the most active business young men of our valley. They will make as good nails as any made in the United States.

Advantages of the place. In mentioning the several industries of this town as specifically as I have, it has not been the intention to advertise the business of any firm, but simply to show what can be done and what ought to be done in the town. It is no exaggeration to say, that in every factory, the work done cannot be excelled anywhere. This may sound like boasting, but when it is known that each firm has an established name and reputation abroad, as well as at home, and that each has all the business it can do and continually has; it will be seen that their work must be of a superior character, or they could not overcome active competition as they do, in the markets where their wares are sold.

There should be a larger business done in Fallston than is now done. Rents are exceedingly cheap, taxes low, fuel plenty, some water power that might yet be obtained for a good business, and the finest facilities for the use of steam power. The bucket, tub, washboard, paper and cotton manufactory, ought still to be features in the business of Fallston.

Needs of Fallston. The town needs more of thrift and activity among the people than now characterizes it. Not that the people are indolent. This is by no means the case; but they are content to sit down, enjoy what they have, and passively allow other points to attract their citizens, and those desiring a place to invest, from them. The town would advance much more rapidly and attain great prosperity and character abroad, as a part of New Brighton, than it possibly can as a separate corporation. Let it consolidate with that town, and both will be greatly advanced in every point of material progress. That in the course of time would give a free bridge and all other blessings that flow from a union. The beauty of the town might be very materially enhanced by a proper use of the natural means within its immediate reach. There should be a stop put to the unwise practice of denuding the hill sides of the trees that make it so beautiful from what is naturally repulsive, and it is certainly an act that ought to be reprobated. There is no prettier scene in the valley than that afforded by that old hill side in the glory of its June coat of verdure and foliage. To fell the trees and tear up the grass, will make the town look as forlorn and wretched as could well be. There is no necessity for it, to carry out the needs of commerce, as its rugged sides are not fitted for either homes or business houses. There is no reason why this favored spot should not continue to prosper, until its people rank among the most intelligent, industrious and happy in our land. At least so mote it be. BEAVER.

How to Get Along. Don't stop to tell stories in business hours. If you have a place of business, be found there when wanted. No man can get rich by sitting around the stores and saloons. Never "fool" in business matters. Have order, system, regularity and promptness. Do not meddle with business you know nothing of. Do not kick every one in your path. Pay as you go. A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond. Help others when you can; but never give what you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say No. No necessity of snapping it out dog fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully.

Proving an Alibi. The following took place in an attempt to prove an alibi: Attorney S.—"You say that Ellis plowed for you on the 29th of November?" Witness (referring to his book).—"Yes." S.—"What did he do on the 30th?" W.—"He chopped wood." S.—"On the 31st?" W.—"That was Sunday, and we went a squirrel hunting." S.—"What did he do on the 32d?" W.—"He thrashed wheat that day." S.—"What did he do on the 33d?" W.—"It was raining and he shaved out some ax handles." S.—"What did he do on the 34th?" W.—"He chopped wood." S.—"What did he do on the—?" But before the question could be finished, the witness's wife seized him by the collar and whisked him outside of the witness box, yelling in his frightened ear, "You old fool! don't you know that there are only 31 days in the month of November?"

"Mad Dog." One of the baggage-masters of a station between Worcester and Boston is a fat, good-natured, droll fellow, whose jokes have become quite popular on the road. His name is Bill. A short time since, while in the performance of his duties in checking baggage, an ugly Scotch terrier got in his way, and he gave him a smart kick which sent him over the track yelling. The owner of the dog soon appeared high dudgeon, wanting to know who kicked the dog. "Was that your dog?" asked Bill, with his usual drawl. "Certainly it was; what right had you to kick him?" "He's mad," said Bill. "No, he's not mad, either," said the owner. "Well, I should be if anybody kicked me in that way," responded Bill.

Two hundred and forty operatives are employed at the Scranton silk factory.
