"Resolved, That we condemn as wrong in princi ple and most demoralizing in practice, the late congressional retroactive salary increase and all kindred legislation."

Now, it is true that Congress passed the "retroactive salary increase" bill, but it is equally true, that it never would have reached the stature of a law had Presi dent Grant not favored the measure and given to it his official signature. He made it the law of the land; Congress had not the power to do so. Hence, we most respectfully ask the chairman of that committee on resolutions to point out the justice of condemning Congress, and not the President, for giving us the law to which reference is had.—Argus

The resolution is clear enough and needs no explanation, but to enlighten the dulness of the Argus. we may observe that the bill is condemned and, of course, all who are in any way responsible for its passage into law according to their responsibility. When the Argus asserts that the President made the law and that Congress had not the power to do so, it talks incoherentlv. We had supposed, until now that Congress had power to pass a bill over the President's opposition. What does the Argus want? Does it favor the retroactive salary increase? If so, why not speak out and let the people know where it stands? It is not likely that the action of the Republican party will please it now any more than it did last Fall, and we presume that its editor will be one of the "all others" mentioned in the Democratic call, published in the official organ of the Democracy of Beaver coun-

If the Argus was not anxious to find fault with the Republican party it would have stated, unless ignorant, that the retroactive feature of the salary increase bill did not effect the President and therefore he could not have been influenced by any personal motives as doubtless some of the members both Republican and Democratic were. The President received no back pay, the increase of his salary did not take effect until the commencement of his second term. In regard to his approval of the bill, it must be recollected that it came before him not by itself, as a separate measure to be acted on, on its own merits, but was put in the Civil and Diplomatic Appropriation bill which contained those appropriations necessary to carry on the Government and hence he could not veto the back pay section and approve the rest of the appropriations. The whole Appropriation bill had either to be vetoed or approved, and the President could not veto it on account of the back pay feature, since Congress had not time to agree upon and pass an other to take its place. Congress doubtless was afraid that the President would veto the bill with the retroactive section in it if it came before him by itself unencumbered and therefore included it in the Appropriation bill where he would be forced to give his signa- Woodward and Meredith, President-28. ture to it in order to obtain the We think the members of the needful power by which to move the machinery of the Government. The Argus like the dog that barks at its own shadow, makes itself rediculous by its fault-finding and empty noise.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVEN TION.

Although it has been difficult o late to always obtain a quorum, yet the Convention has been making quite rapid progress toward the completion of its labors. The open or endorsed ballot clause in the section on sufferage and elections, was so amended as to make the endorsement of the ballot optional with the voter, thus rendering the change of little use, and making it conform to public opinion. The people are not willing to forego the secret ballot for an imaginary reform. The Convention has reversed its former action in regard to a liquor prohibitory clause and voted down by a large majority, the amendment on that subject, which was passed early in the winter, when a majority of the people in the State were supposed to be in favor of it. The fifteen hundred dollars increase which the members voted for themselves was a piece of work not unlike in appearance, the Congressional salary grab that was so universally denounced by the press. It is very probable that $2500 salary is not too much pay, considering the high prices of living in Philadelphia, but all the members, when elected understood that they were to receive only $1060, and to increase that amount because they had the power to do so, by their own votes, looks very much like what has been dubbed a "grab." As a matter of record we give, for the information of the public,

THE Argus asks why the Republican Convention did not condemn General Grant for signing the retroactive Congressional salary bill? We have stated the reasons in another article, and now we, in turn, enquire why the State Democratic Committee did not request their Chairman not only to denounce the the usurpation of Federal thority in Louisiana affairs, but also to condemn Congress for passing and the President for approving the back pay salary grab. The Chairman of the Democratic Committee was in Congress, and of course was directly benefitted by the bill, and is his mouth sealed because he was in favor of the bill and has drawn his extra money? or what is the matter? The Louisiana difficulties perhaps will afford sufficient ammunition to carry on the campaign opposition to something near home would give better chances of succase. The political condition of Louisiana is certainly not very pucouraging, and it is probable that Republicans will he able to agree with much that the Democratic Chairman will say on that subject.

THE WALWORTH PARRICIDE. Mansfield Tracy Walworth, a literary man and author of flashy novels, was shot by his son Frank (aged 19,) in New York on the 3d inst. The elder Walworth was a bad husband and father, and had, it the city and throughout the country. seems, been in the habit of sending threatening letters to his family from whom he was separated and creating in the community an impression unfavorable to the chastity of his wife. The young man defended his mother against the father, and in order to settle some family matters appointed the meeting that resulted in the shooting of the father by the son, a crime that shocks the moral sense of the country and reveals a condition of society that if startling. The orime is horrible and the coolness of the murderer and his assertion that he had committed no crime is almost beyond belief. The first impression was that the boy was insane and not responsible for his acts, and it is to be hoped that this may turn out to be the case, but the facts, as publish. ed, rather show the deed was premeditated and cowardly executed. The father is taken at a disadvantage, and shot down without warnthe murder on account of the effect it will have on "his family." -A Farmer's Convention, composed of men of all parties, was held in Washington, Iowa on Monday last, to nominate candidates for the Legislature and county officers. Every township in the county was represented, and, judging from the vigorous tone of the resolutions, the delegates were a resolute set of men. They deflounce the State Legislature for failing to pass a law regulating railroad rates, and declare that no candidate for the Legislature will be supported who will not pledge himself to vote for such a law, and to refuse to accept passes or any other petty bribes from railroad corporations. The candidates whom they named are requried, in accepting the nomination, to abandon ail former political connections, and to profess allegiance henceforth only to the interests of the farmers and workingmen. It is expected that a State Convention of the same character will soon be held in Iowa.

-Massachusetts Republicans seem to be actually alarmed at Gen. Butler's determination to seize the Gubernatorial chair by force, and to fear that he will win in spite of his unpopularity. A Boston correspondent of the Hartford Courant gives some insight into their trepidation and their schemes to defeat the chief of the salary grabbers: hear of no one who is likely to be run against Gen. Butler in the Republic Convention, except Gov. Washburn. The more bold-and I thing the more sagacious of the Republicans would like a resolute and plucky leader, who had qualifications for the stump, and would face or follow Butler in his appeals to the people. The best course for the anti-Butler Republicans to pursue is to take the ground in advance that they will not support But. ler if he be nominated, and to justify themselves by declaring, what they undoubtedly believe, that he is not a fit man to be Governor of Massachusetts. Let them give out beforehand that they will bolt, and there are thousands who will follow them. They may not succeed in defeating him but they are stronger on his track than they are on any other, and in another year the party would be purified and the State would be with
