

HOUSE AND FARM.

Sore Nose and Saddle Galls in Horses. The nose of many horses sometimes discovered to be sore, and intrusted with scabs, when no other disease is apparent. This condition may be the result of constitutional debility; but it is, in the Southern States, more frequently produced by a certain poisonous weed that grows in these latitudes, and which, from its peculiar effects upon the horse, is there known as "sneeze-weed."

especially; or perhaps the skin of the back is scalded from the use of a woolen blanket, forming a worse sore than even saddle galls. At any rate, his horse is in no condition to bear the saddle; yet he must ride the poor creature, or else dispose of him at a sacrifice, and hurry forward by some other mode of conveyance. In such a predicament, the knowledge of some means, either to cure the sore back or remove pressure from it, when the saddle is being worn, would not be merely of pecuniary benefit, but, to every humane person, it would prove a source of real pleasure.

grape. These generally color long before they are mature; and thus many a novice in fruit culture frequently forms an unjust opinion of his varieties simply from testing unripe specimens. Grapes should always be severed from the vine with strong scissors or trimming shears, and never twisted or broken off. While most of the large fruits ripen better off than on the tree, Mr. Hoopes very properly accepts the peach. We should make the exception still more emphatic. We were strengthened in our opinion that peaches commonly acquire their highest flavor upon the tree by a little experience a few days since. We received from Mr. Bateham, of Ohio, a crate of Hale's Early, a portion of which were considerably mashed, evidently mellow when picked; the remainder retained their form, were but fairly mellow, and were probably hard when gathered. The bruised ones were much the higher flavored, hardly tasting like the same peach.
