

POETRY.

THE BUTTER FLY AND BEE. TO FLAVIA

See, Flavia, see that fluttering thing
Skim round yon flower with sportive wing,
Yet ne'er its sweets explore;
While wiser the industrious bee,
Extracts the honey from the tree,
And hives the precious store.

So you with coy coquetish art,
Play wanton round your lover's heart,
If sensible and free;
Love's balmy blessing would you try,
No longer sport a butterfly,
But imitate the bee.

A PARODY,

BY A NEWS PRINTER.

"His face was long and many a sigh heav'd he,
"For, lack a day, his purse was quite empty."
To dun, or not to dun? that's the question;
Whether, 'tis better that the purse should
Suffer (for lack of cash) by baneful emptiness,
Or by a gentle dun, to fill it up.
To dun—to get the money—and be enabled
To live and pay our debts, 'tis a consumation
Devoutly to be wished. To dun, to be denied:
Denied, with "call again"—aye there's the rub,
For, in that call again, what evils come?
What disappointment sore—chagrin and wo?
What time is wasted, and what shoes are worn
In consequence? must give me pain.

It is this

That makes so many debts not worth collecting
'Tis this which sickens business to despair,
And keeps from honest labor its reward.
We don't forget our many, many friends.
To them a debt of gratitude we owe—
To them our gratitude we freely pay.
Buoy'd by their kindness, still our bark shall sail,
Enjoy the pleasing calm, or dread the boisterous gale,
