

THE PATRIOT.

Eloquence the soul, song charms the sense

BELLEFONTE, JULY 1821.

[SELECTED.]

MELANCHOLY.

There is a charm no joys bestow,
Nor rank, nor wealth impart;
'Tis when the tear is stealing slow,
And softly sighs the heart.
Oft have I watch'd the evening sky,
Where rose the silver bow;
My bosom heav'd, I knew not why,
And tears began to flow.
Ah! then I thought that mirth was
folly,
Thine was the charm—sweet Melancholy.

Ye hearts of stone that think no bliss
Can glisten in a tear,
Who think the love that sighs a kiss
Inspid and severe:
Ah! ne'er was turn'd on you, ye
cold,
The dew'd and tender eye;
The warmest love that e'er was told,
Was breath'd upon a sigh.
Mirth is deceit, and laughter folly,
Bliss waits the sigh of Melancholy.

Poetical Epistle,

From an Irishman, lately landed in America, to his charmer in Ireland.

Honey—I've got here at last,
I tell you, my sweet little Mog;
I set out from Belfast,
I wish I'd been sunk in a bog.

Here am I, sitting alone
In a room, with a big heap of men;
And I feel as uneasy I own,
As a stray pig shut up in a pen.
Since the Yankees, a villanous crew,
Have my eyes cheated out of my head;
Their tricks I begin to see through,
And know how to butter my bread.

The sharpeners here think it no hurt,
To rob a man not worth a pin,
And if you've no back to your shirt,
They'll make cow-hide boots out of your skin.

Pon my soul they join'd in a plot,
Both big and great, little & small,
To steal from me all that I've got,
Tho' they know I've got nothing at all.

I shall die if I'm forc'd to live here,
Such rogues I am living among;
To get back and live with my dear,
I would jump at a chance to be hung.

Suppose I should happen to die,
Say in Boston or Passamaquoddy,
They will never let poor Paddy lie,
By the side of a sociable body.

Having stolen my goods and my money,
As soon as I'm dead as a herring,
Thrown into the docks or the woods,
I shall suffer for want of a burying.

Not a stone will they set up to say
What a poor Paddy lies underneath,
And my funeral expences to pay,
Horn buttons they'll make of my teeth.

But when I am dead as a post,
You shall know it without any fail,
For faith I will send you my ghost,
Enclos'd in a letter next mail.

Rouchelcualt, justly observes—
—We should often blush for our brightest actions, were the world but to see from whence they spring."
