

If he was a conscience stricken victim of guilt, public good may be subserved by a disclosure of the foregoing facts." The letter contains a Postscript, stating that it is ascertained that the name of the stranger was Lewis, and conjectures, from some circumstances that he belongs to New York.

Bonaparte's Will.

Extract of a letter to the Editor of the London Times, dated Paris, January 17, 1822: "I send you an extract from the last will and testament of Bonaparte disposing of sums of money which he claims as his property, to those friends and servants who had followed him in his different changes of fortune. It is printed here and handed about privately, in the shape of a small pamphlet, but can neither publicly be sold, nor is it allowed to be copied into the journals. I have made inquiries about its authenticity, and have heard that no doubt need be entertained on the subject. Besides this testament, of which an extract is here subjoined, the Ex Emperor left a kind of political will, which speaks of higher things and disposes of larger sums. This latter document, which is in the possession of M. Dupin, has as yet been known to very few persons, and will for some time at least, be kept a secret from the public. In it the prisoner of St. Helena disposes of an almost imperial fortune of 40 millions of francs to public institutions, to particular classes, and for political purposes. It would be curious to learn how such a treasure was acquired, and Bonaparte does not conceal the fact. As Emperor he enjoyed a civil list of 24 millions a year; and out of this, by living within his income, he saved ten millions every year for the four years before his marriage. After his return from Russia, or during the Russian expedition, he ordered all those savings to be lent for the public service. This loan he reclaims in his will, and disposes of it in a manner of which I shall probably be able in a few days to inform you. After this, nobody need wonder that the Pope, on the discovery of America, thought himself entitled to the disposal of the western world.

THE VICISSITUDES OF TRAVELLING.

Mr. John Joseph Harrison, came last year to Canada, from London, with an intention to settle, and soon after wrote to his wife to follow him. Owing to the sickness and death of a child she did not come as soon as he expected. He fell sick, but succeeded in reaching this city; and sailed for London the middle of October, apparently in the last stages of consumption. On this voyage he quite recovered his health; and on his arrival found that his wife had sailed for Quebec, where she arrived in September, and learned he had gone to N. York. She followed him to this city, but did not reach it till fourteen days after he had sailed. Destitute of friends and money, she appealed to the best feelings of some gentlemen here, who furnished her with the means to pay her passage in the Robert Edwards, to London; where she arrived in December, and found that her anxious husband had remained but one day there, having sailed for New York. He reached this place fourteen days ago. His wife immediately made the necessary arrangements to return in the Robert Edwards, in which she arrived on Sunday night. It is understood that he is in the city, and it is hoped that this notice of their "perils by sea and perils by land," may meet his view. N. Y. Nat. Adv.

EMIGRATION.

We perceive that a society called the "British Union society" is now forming at Dorchester, by a number of religious families, for the purpose of establishing an agricultural colony in the state of Illinois, in the United States. A general fund is to be raised by subscription for the purchase of land stock, &c; and a common store is to be kept, from which the colonists will be supplied with goods at wholesale prices. Religious teachers will be appointed, and the children will be taught useful learning. Many other regulations are proposed in the plan, with a view to ensure the success of the emigrants.

LATEST FROM PANAMA AND LIMA.

The Baltimore American of Tuesday furnishes some advices from Panama as late as the 20th of January, obtained through the medium of two newspapers established there since the late revolution; one termed "the Gazette of the Independent Government of Panama;" the other the "Miscellany of the Isthmus of Panama free and independent." Thus the first fruits of liberty every where are the establishment of presses for the free expression of sentiment. They inform us that Lacerna, the late royal commander in chief at Lima, was in the mountains with a force not exceeding 2,000 men, weakened by desertion. At Lima forces were preparing for an expedition against Arica: and at Payta, troops were concentrating to reinforce Guyaquil, which would seem to be threatened by Lacerna.

At Lima every thing was in a happy train, and general St. Martin was fully restored to health. A royal fleet among which were two frigates, was at Panama, between the commander of which and the head of the new government a treaty for mutual convenience it seems, had been made. The probability of the arrival of the Chilean fleet is hinted. The ports lying between latitudes 15 and 20 south are blockaded; three large vessels of war have proceeded to cruise there. A copy of a letter from the bishop to the government is published "in the official paper, complaining of the establishment at Panama of a Lodge of the "detestable" society of Freemasons. In an editorial article, however, the fraternity is fully defended; and the government in its answer very discreetly and respectfully declines to act upon a private denunciation, however the author may be venerable, and refers the matter to the public tribunals and the laws of the state."

The message of the President recommending the recognition of the Spanish American states, has produced a considerable bustle at Washington. Rumor says, according to a statement in the Washington Gazette, that Don Joaquin de Andagua is already busily employed in preparing a clamorous paper in the shape of a protest. In the diplomatic corps generally a strong sensation has been produced. That Spain should protest against the measure is natural: it is all she has left. Independent those states are: and independent they will be. In truth, the wisest policy for Spain would be to recognize them herself, as they might give to her advantages, from a similarity of language and customs, in her commercial relations with them, which otherwise she will irretrievably lose; while an obstinate assertion of her former rights without the means of enforcing them is equally absurd and unanimous measure is hardly however to be expected. As respects the European powers, sooner or later, they will fall into the same measure. The trade of those rich countries is too inviting a subject not to be willingly sought for by the maritime powers, by means of commercial treaties. So far as we have seen, the voice of the people of the United States cordially approves the decisive step taken by the President Monroe. Events have long led us to think the period had arrived when "the fogs of nature and of nature's God" pointed the way to a new face of things in the former Spanish colonies as clearly as they did in 1776 to the independence of our country, and they decidedly merit the recognition of every just and honest people as the thirteen states did in their glorious struggle.
