

Agricultural Department.

Thorough Draining and Deep Culture.

The fact is patent to the most superficial observation that the total sum of the vast production of our agriculture is the yield of an average depth of cultivation of soil not exceeding six inches—comparatively a mere film of the earth's surface. All the inorganic matter needed by plants, and all other elements of their nutrition and full development that come from the earth, must be supplied within this limit, while all the soil below this depth is unemployed and inert. The roots of the grain and grasses do not ordinarily extend below the depth cultivated; and the average of this in our country is insufficient either for protection against drought, for adequate returns for the labor of cultivation, or for full supplies of farm products for national consumption. We may not be able to calculate the precise amount of increase in production due to an additional inch in depth of cultivation, but experiments have shown that in many soils it bears, relatively, a near proportion to the increase in depth of culture; so that, where the soil is now worked to six inches, an inch greater depth of cultivation would give nearly one-sixth more production. The agricultural production of 1867, of those articles which would be influenced by depth of culture, has a total value of at least $150,000,000. Now, an increase of even one-tenth of this amount by an additional inch of culture would add $1,500,000, to the value of the annual agricultural production of the country.

An erroneous impression exists relative to the depth to which the roots of the cereals and clovers, as well as many other plants, will descend in an treated and healthy soil. In ravines that have been filled with surface soil, or wherever mould is of suitable texture and condition, carrots and parsnips are often found of a length of three feet or more; clover roots from three to four feet; and instances have been given of still greater length of the roots of wheat and oats. With the prevalent mode of culture, in very compact soils, wheat roots are so near the surface as to be thrown out by the mechanical displacement of freezing and thawing, and, if not utterly destroyed, they struggle fruitlessly to pierce the unbroken sub-soil, packed, perhaps, by the tread of cattle for a century, and finally yield to the blasting power of an early drouth, blighted, shrivelled, light, worthless for seed, and of but little value for bread. The drill, planting the seed firmly in the earth, instead of scattering it on the surface, already saves half the winter-killing in the fields where it is used; and deep culture, with proper drainage, would exempt from most of the remaining liabilities, and ordinarily, from all dangers of loss from drouth. The advantage of additional depth of pulverization, therefore, would often be far greater than the proportionate increase of depth, and the profit of improvement would be increased in corresponding ratio. In this country the average yield per acre of one of the principle staples, wheat, under our system of shallow cultivation, has been gradually lessened, until at the present time it does not exceed 12 bushels per acre, while England, with her deep tillage and rotation system, has raised her average to 28 bushels. Estimating our wheat area at 18,000,000 acres, and allowing an increase of 16 bushels per acre under a system of thorough and judicious cultivation, the increased production would amount to 288,000,000 bushels; and wheat is but one of the staples to be benefited by such an improvement.

Deep cultivation is a prime necessity of root culture, which forms the basis of English agriculture, and enables the English farmer to pay annual rents equivalent to the fee-simple value of our farms. The growing of the "green crops" results in a more thorough admixture of the food-producing elements of the soil and its prompt permeation by water and the gases, which are so necessary to plant-growth. France, following in our footsteps, or we in hers, in at least one particular—the want of a proper rotation system—has reduced the average yield of wheat to 15 bushels. The single fact that, while England has two acres in "green crops" for every acre in wheat, France has three acres in wheat for every acre in "green crops," and that with our roots are scarcely raised as a farm crop, explains the cause of the great discrepancy in the yield of that valuable cereal in these countries.—Report of Commissioner of Agriculture.

MANURED POTATOES.—T. Montgomery, of Mattoon, Ill., writing to the Rural American on the subject of raising potatoes, says, that last year he planted five-eighths of an acre of Peachblow potatoes. Before planting, the ground was laid off with a two-horse plow in deep furrows; these were then filled nearly half full of very well rotted manure, then harrowed over and the potatoes planted and covered with the hoe. Then another patch of the same size was planted the same, except the manure. Now for the result, the cultivation being the same. The first lot yielded 248 bushels, and the latter only 75. I think the manuring paid in this instance, as it will doubtless always do.

When older, the knowledge gained will be of great service to them in making and repairing implements on the farm. But there are habits which they acquire in spending their leisure time at the village, which is the ruin of many a promising boy, for where we do find a village now, in which there is not one or two taverns, where the temptation appears to be strong, judging from the numbers we generally find in them getting spirituous liquors to drink? When farmers learn to make their homes attractive for their boys and themselves? A few good books, one or more good agricultural papers, and last, but not least, a workshop.—Ohio Farmer.

SUPERIOR EARLY ROSE POTATOES.—We learn that several parties last spring sold large quantities of a variety of potatoe that resembles the Early Rose, but is a spurious kind.—That same variety is now being sold in various parts of the country at a reduced rate; and it will be well for our readers to be cautious in making purchases of irresponsible parties.—We obtained our supply from the party who first introduced it to the public; consequently, we guarantee that it is genuine.—Rural American.

THE Commissioners on the cattle disease appointed in New York, have ordered that all cars containing cattle shall be stopped on entering the State, and if not in good condition the cattle are to be disembarked and the cars disinfected, after which, if the cattle are healthy, they can be reshipped. At other points, the same process will be repeated if necessary.—Sufficient precaution will be taken in case actual disease is found. SORREL, which is a pest to any field, may be eradicated by the judicious application of lime or ashes. The souring principle of sorrel is oxalic acid; if this is removed from the soil, sorrel cannot grow. Lime or potash unite with the oxalic acid, forming oxalate of lime or potash. These substances are sometimes called sweeteners of the soil, from their ability to remove acids from it. Sorrel will never grow on lime soil. It is said that owing to the drouth last year, short keeping during the exposure to heavy rains in spring, the wool clip in Ohio was much lighter than usual this year. Some persons estimate the average yield per head at 15 to 25 per cent. less than last year; but the staple is white and clean, and remarkably free from oil. The number of sheep in the State is greater than it was last year. The wheat crop of Iowa is said to be immense, the yield averaging 27 bushels to the acre. The yield of corn is also very large. The cultivation of corn in Iowa is conducted principally by machinery. It is said that 50,000 acres of new prairie land have been broken up in Newton county alone this year. STREAM plowing in California promises to be a success. The machine is their own invention. It cuts a furrow nine feet wide, and from five to eight inches deep, pulverizing fine, travels six miles an hour, and weighs but seven tons. THOROUGH drainage, deep plowing a liberal use of manure with fertilizers, and good cultivation, cannot fail to produce remunerative, beautiful harvests. Let farmers heed these hints and suggestions. The wool crop of New York State is about 17,000,000 pounds; which is principally grown in Washington, Rensselaer, Genesee, Livingston, Ontario and Steuben counties—the first named leading off with $700,000 lbs. FLAX seed occasionally given to horses or cattle, will make them shed their old hair, and whether young or old, soon get sleek and fat. It is the only thing that will fatten some old horses.—Items Rural American.

The Farmer's Workshop.

No reasonable farmer will dispute the importance of having a workshop upon his premises, and especially those who have boys to bring up. Boys will be busy, and if opportunity is not given for a full employment of their time, either with work or sport at home, they will seek diversion abroad, which will not usually result profitably. A farmer gives his experience and opinion upon the matter in the following sensible talk:

How many farmers do we find that have not the ingenuity to repair a rake, or other small farm implement. Were they brought up on a farm?—Yes. Well, then, why is it? Some may say they are of that unfortunate class of mortals that are not gifted with their share of ingenuity. This is a great mistake. If you will take the trouble to inquire of them what they spent their time at when young, they will tell you farming. Was their father a farmer? Yes, the best in the neighborhood, they may say.—Well what did he employ himself and boys at rainy days? "O nothing; when it rained too hard to work, we generally spent our time at the village, in the stores and tavern. You know that boys want rest sometimes."—Very true, but is there no other enjoyment for boys than at the tavern and stores? Had the father had a workshop, with a selected lot of tools, would not those boys have had some job for a rainy day, such as a little cart, sleigh, wagon, or boat to make or repair? There are very few boys who do not have such things to make. Thus by having a small workshop, boys soon acquire a taste to handle tools, and tinker up many little playthings of their own.

When older, the knowledge gained will be of great service to them in making and repairing implements on the farm. But there are habits which they acquire in spending their leisure time at the village, which is the ruin of many a promising boy, for where we do find a village now, in which there is not one or two taverns, where the temptation appears to be strong, judging from the numbers we generally find in them getting spirituous liquors to drink? When farmers learn to make their homes attractive for their boys and themselves? A few good books, one or more good agricultural papers, and last, but not least, a workshop.—Ohio Farmer.

She Would't Marry A Mechanic.

A young man began visiting a young woman, and appeared to be well pleased. One evening he called when it was quite late, which led the young girl to inquire where he had been. "I had to work to-night." "What! do you work for a living?" she inquired, in astonishment. "Certainly," replied the young man. "I am a mechanic." "I dislike the name of a mechanic," and she turned up her pretty nose.

That was the last time the young man visited the young woman. He is now a wealthy man, and has one of the best women in the country for his wife.

The lady who disliked the name of mechanic is now the wife of a miserable fool, a regular vagrant about grog-shops, and the soft, verdant and miserable girl is obliged to take in washing in order to support herself and children.

You dislike the name of mechanic, eh? You, whose brothers are but well dressed loafers.

We pity any girl who has so little brains, who is so verdant, so soft, as to think less of the young man for being a mechanic—one of God's noblest men—the most dignified and honorable personage of Heaven's creatures. Beware young lady, how you treat young men who work for a living, for you may one day be menial to one of them yourself.

Running Out of Meeting.

Lorenzo Dow is reported to have stopped persons from leaving his meeting by requesting "all who had holes in the heels of their stockings to go then or stay through." A similar instance though more truthful, and in better taste, is given in the history of Phineas Rice, a Methodist itinerant.

While he was stationed in one of the New York churches, he found that many of the young people, of both sexes, were accustomed to leave the church before closing the evening service. It annoyed him, and he determined to stop it. The next Sabbath evening before he commenced his sermon, he said: "Some of my brethren have been greatly afflicted that so many young women leave church before the service is through. But I tell them that they ought not to feel so, for doubtless most of those that go out are young women who live at home, and their mistresses require them to be at home at nine o'clock; and the young men have to go out to wait upon them home; so hereafter, when these young women leave church before the service is over, you will understand who they are, and not feel badly about it." The brother who gave me this fact, said: "We were no more annoyed after this; they either staid away, or staid till the meeting was closed."

RESIST THE BEGINNING.—The Arabs have a fable of a miller, who was one day startled by a camel's nose thrust in the window of a room where he was sleeping. "It is very cold outside," said the camel; "I only want to get my nose in." The nose was let in, then the neck, and finally the whole body. Presently the miller began to be extremely inconvenienced by the ungainly companion he had obtained, in a room certainly not large enough for both. "If you are inconvenienced," said the camel, "you may leave." As for myself, I shall stay where I am.

The moral of the fable concerns all. When temptation occurs, we must not yield to it. We must not allow as much as its "nose" to come in. Every-thing like sin is to be turned away from. He who yields even in the smallest degree, will soon be entirely overcome; and the last state of this man is worse than the first.

A mountain exchange tells of a band of Indians who made a sudden attack on a band of soldiers in the mountains. The soldiers had a mountain howitzer mounted on a mule.—Not having time to get it off and put it in position, they backed up the mule and let drive at the Indians.—The load was so heavy that mule and all went tumbling down the hill toward the savages, who, not understanding that kind of warfare fled like deer. Afterwards one of them was captured, and when asked why he ran so, replied: "Me big injun, not afraid of big guns or little guns, but when white men load up and fire a whole jackass at injun, me don't know what to do."

This is the way a French paper chronicles an accident: "On Saturday an accident, which might have been attended with sad results, took place in this city (Paris). A bricklayer, having lost his balance, fell from the sixth story of a house to the street. Fortunately, two women, who were chatting on the sidewalk, received the falling man on their heads and broke his fall. The bricklayer was taken up safe and sound. The bystanders shuddered to think that but for a lucky chance the accident would have cost him his life. The two women were instantly killed."

The distinguished English orator, Robert Lowe, said in a speech made a few days before the Parliamentary election: "My wish is to carry on the progress of the country in the direction which for good or evil it has taken. This is the problem which I invite you to consider. Perhaps the best thing is to look at America, not as a warning to deter, but as an example to imitate."
