

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN.

W. W. BROWN, Editor. A. B. HITCHCOCK, Editor.

Terms, $2 per Annum, in Advance. BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, March 3, '69.

How Careless.

The Watchman, and other semi-rebel sheets, have a great deal to say about the extravagance of the Republican party; but they are very careful not to expose their own rottenness, extravagance and corruption.

They do not, however, neglect their own interests. No, no—not they. Every dollar that can be made; every penny that can be filched from the public, is snugly tucked down and their attention immediately turned to the next little speculation; but never once to repairing the Court House, or the fence which surrounds it.

Crawford County System.

A few months ago the Editor of the Centre Hall Reporter commenced agitating and urging the adoption of the Crawford County System upon the Democratic party of this county.

Now, we would inform Mr. KURTZ, that we are not authorized to speak for Mr. Thompson, but this much we will venture to say, that "Moss Thompson" and his political "friends" would sooner go to hell than do any such thing—to vote the Democratic ticket!

The Price of Grain.

We do not intend, as a general thing, to meddle with the prices of grain, further than to give, from week to week, a true statement of the markets both here and in Philadelphia.

We do not advise the farmers to sell or not to sell; and we request them to act upon their own judgment and not upon ours; but we, as we have already said, do not believe the statements made by the Chicago Tribune. Consequently if we had wheat to sell we would not sell at present prices.

Finally, we want the Tribune to explain to us why the speculators in grain who are buying it up at from $1.40 to $1.60, are not anxious to get it off their hands at present Philadelphia prices?

Who is he?—Gen. GRANT announced, a few days ago, that Pennsylvania would be represented in his Cabinet. He declined to give the name of the man he had chosen, stating, at the same time, that it was a selection which nobody seemed to anticipate, but with which everybody would be pleased.

How stupid (?) the smartest of men sometimes are. Who else could it be, but the chevalier Bayard of the war, the modest and retiring hero of Fort Steadman, Gen. JNO. F. HARRISBURG, now Auditor General of Pennsylvania? What other name would so completely "fill the bill"?

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT ADOPTED.—Both Houses of the National Legislature have finally adopted the proposed constitutional amendment.

The bill including the amendment, reads as follows: "It is enacted, etc: two thirds of both Houses concurring, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and when ratified by three-fourths thereof, it shall be a part of said Constitution. Article 15. The right of any citizen of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

Protection.

Too much, we think, cannot be said, or written, upon the subject of Protection to American Industry. It is the only policy that will give an impetus to our manufacturing and business interests, and enhance the interests of the laboring men of the country.

The friends of free trade are at work. The Democratic Watchman, and all the Democratic papers in the country, at the bidding of the New York Free Trade League, and the English aristocracy, that furnishes the money to keep it in existence, have thrown off the masks hitherto worn by them, and openly and avowedly espoused the cause of English free trade.

But while they are working to build up England, and fasten the slavish chains upon Ireland, the friends of American industry are not idle. On the 17th and 18th of February last, they met in Philadelphia and organized the "National Industrial League." Leading protectionists from almost every State in the Union were present, and there, in sight of Independence Hall, they resolved that they would spare no pains, energy or labor, in urging upon our Congress the importance of legislation in favor of American men, and American industry.

The Irish Republic, in speaking of the organization of the "National Industrial League," says that the object of these men was to save the great Republic of the West, which England failed to conquer by force of arms, from becoming a mere English dependency, by force of what is called Free Trade.

A check for ten thousand dollars, the amount of insurance on General Rousseau's life, has been forwarded to his widow, by the insurance agent in Washington.

Under the supposed protection, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, of ANDREW JOHNSON'S Amnesty Proclamation, JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE has ventured back to the United States. He is the first of the expatriated rebels, excepted in previous amnesty proclamations, who has returned. He will probably be soon followed by JACOB THOMPSON, SIDDELL and JUDAH BENJAMIN, and possibly all of them will ask some reward of the rebels in consequence of their sufferings.

The last public appearance of Breckinridge, previous to his going over to the Rebels, was at Baltimore, and in the same city he makes his reappearance. Of all the miscreants who took part with the Rebellion, this man was the most odious in his treachery. He had not the common and paltry excuse of lesser Rebels, that he must go with his State, because his State did not go with the Rebellion. He could not rely upon the allegation that he was in the South when the Rebellion broke out, and was carried away by the excitement around him. He was a member of the Senate of the United States when Fort Sumter was attacked, having sworn to support and defend the Constitution a short time previously. He stayed in the Senate, participating in public business, after the war had commenced, and although he interposed his feeble influence in favor of the Rebels, he did so at the same time protesting his loyalty. It was on the 8th of August, nearly five months after the commencement of the war, after two battles of Big Bethel, Boonville, Rich Mountain, Carrick's Ford and Bull Run, that Breckinridge at his last dinner with the Secessionists of Baltimore, and received their congratulations, no doubt, at his intended defection. He left Baltimore immediately afterward, sought the Confederate lines and offered himself as a volunteer in the Rebel cause. Scarcely any instance of treason as nefarious can be pointed to. It was an act worthy of any one who, if he had lived in the Revolution, would have envied and followed the example of Benedict Arnold. As a soldier, Breckinridge was a failure. He took to the rebellion neither honesty or talent. He required high office as the price of his treachery, and he was made a Major-General, a position for which he was neither fitted by education nor capacity. He was an incubus to the Rebel cause rather than a benefit, and for his last vainglorious and disgraceful flight, which a large portion of the chivalry of that plumed regiment, by the result, will never forgive him.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Who, then, are the friends of England, and the enemies of Ireland?—land? Who puts the plunder into the pockets of the former, and locks the chains on the limbs of the latter? The man who vote for Free Trade. The men—let them gnash their teeth at it, if they choose, but they shall bear the truth—the men who support the Democratic party.

THE FOLLOWING IS GOVERNOR GEARY'S DISPATCH TO GENERAL GRANT, DENYING THE REPORT THAT HE HAD WRITTEN A LETTER RECOMMENDING A PENNSYLVANIA FOR A CABINET APPOINTMENT:

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 26, '69. Gen. U. S. Grant, Pres't Elect. By the newspapers of to-day I observe that certain persons have stated to you that I have written you a letter to influence your Cabinet appointment from Pennsylvania. I have never written or telegraphed to you, or to any other person, a word in favor of, or against any one for that position. If you have received any such letters or telegrams, they are forgeries. Truly yours, JNO. W. GEARY.

The audience objected, and the consequence was the lights were put out, and the manager left, the crowd dispersing in an hour or two.

For the Republic.

Messrs. EDITORS:—Bacon truly said that labor was the only real wealth of a country. That being an acknowledged fact by all political economists, the legislation of a nation should have a tendency to foster, promote and preserve that wealth, and thereby enhance the substantial prosperity of the country, and its laboring members.

An acquaintance of ours, who went to Mexico eighteen months ago, as an employee of a British and Mexican R. R. Company, recently returned, gave us a sketch of his experience there, and here, since his return, which corroborates the prevailing idea entertained by the toiling masses, that our Government's legislation has a tendency to promote interests antagonistic to the welfare of labor.

What the honest, toiling masses wish to know is, what causes this state of affairs—that honest, intelligent, sober and industrious American citizens are compelled to be idle, and see their little ones want for the common necessities of life, and that, too, in the most inclement season of the year.

Remarks of Senator Cameron.

In the Senate, on Wednesday, Mr. Buckalew, while discussing the question of changing the mode of choosing Presidential electors, charged that half a million of dollars had been poured out in Pennsylvania to control the last Presidential election.

Mr. Cameron. I shall vote in favor of the motion now made by the Senator from Nevada. I had no intention to say a word on this subject, and should not have done so but for a remark which fell from my colleague, which I think was disrespectful to the State from which he and I come, in that we were both born, and to which we owe not only allegiance, but love.

I reply to the remark of my colleague, I think I may say with confidence, that there is hardly a man in Pennsylvania, who is not acquainted with that contest, and who does not believe that Colonel Fremont was cheated out of the vote of Pennsylvania by the activity and dishonesty of the men who supported Mr. Buchanan. Large sums of money were brought into Pennsylvania to use as a corruption fund and they were so used.
