The Democratic Candidate for Gov-

To the uninitiated, says the Beaver Radical, the contest for the empty honor of a Democratic nomination for Governer of Pennsylvania lies between Gen. GEO. W. CASS, Hon. ASA PACK-ER and Gen. Wm. McCandles. But not far behind the scenes another and more ponderous aspirant lies concealed, and this ambushed hero is no less a personage than Mai. Gen. WINFIELD S. HANCOCK. The relative strength of these candidates may be more correctly estimated after a survey of the interests and aims of vast corporations, potent but invisible in the struggle, and a glance at the attitude of the Democratic party during the eight years past, with its present straits and necessities.

First then, a struggle of the greatest magnitude between the Eastern and the North-eastern lines of railroad traversing our State, and the "Trunk lines" running east and west, is now going on, and everything political in some way or other seems to be dragged into this warring vortex. Cass represents the 'Trunk line' interest, and Packer the Eastern and Northern system. Each party to the war has determined to own the next Governor. The bitterness which already characterizes the contest, and the unlimited resources of the combatants, will most probably reduce the contest between the Railroad sources. Kings to a Kilkenny cat fight, and the arena being cleared of them, either party will dash in to put up a compromise candidate, each intriguing to get off with all of the nominee, and both-ten to one-being cheated in the end.

HANCOCK and McCANDLES are both bitter pills for the Democracy of Pennsylvania to swallow, for both have waged a merciless war on Democracy from the first gun at Sumpter, until the collapse of the late rebellion of the Democratic party. Both, however, have made such amends as lay in their power, and the question now between them is which can grovel lowest before the party both were shooting during the mental truth. war. It is difficult to decide to whom the palm should be given; nor do we know where, outside a Magdalen society, the power to judge between them exists. HANCOCK, however, in our analysis seems to have gathered a baseness of peculiar rankness and infamy. McCandles entered the army as a Democrat, and without giving up his party fealty, shot its adherents down without pity, but not, as it seems, without remorse. He came from the walks of civil and political life, and his sympathies and surroundings held him withir the pale of his party. His young and generous heart bore him headlong after the idol in whose worship so many brave fellows have fallen; and if Mc-CLELLAN had not been permitted to startle us with his incapacity and demagoguery, the chances are that Mc. | country recovered only under the pro-CANDLES would have been a good Republican. His fall was more to be attributed to his generous enthusiasm than to positive dullness. But with HANCOCK it is entirely different. He was educated by the Government whose flag was shot down by South in the army, and his oath bound him to defend the flag. His business was to fight. He had no nolities, or if he again do we find the country driven to had they were subordinated to the rigor of military ethics and discipline. No ties were to be broken by the professional soldier born in Pennsylvania, and no political pressure kept him back, or awakened his doubts. He entered the war, backed by his education, his section, his social ties and his duty. Hebegan at once, and fought as became a soldier, and during the struggle he cast behind him political principles and hero worship. McClellan was nothing to him but a rival and a failure. He did good service, and obtained a noble reward. And when a year or two ago, he deliberately concluded through half a century it might have to return to his vomit, he had a long way to go, and a dirty puddle to plunge into. But he made the journey and the plunge, and is now the representative man of those who turn their backs upon their comrades, their flag and their fame. Whether he is yet low is not, then no Federal soldier need prospered—thereby proving how ac- ed to subvert. begin to fall in hope of reaching the curate has been the description of them level of their support. That HANCOCK thinks he has touched bottom there can be little doubt, for he fondly hopes for the nomination at Democratic hands on the 4th of July next. And he is not content with a dignified candidacy; he has commenced to intrigue for the place. The telegraph a few days ago announced, that forgetting his pride and character as a soldier, he protested against commanding officer. The object of his protest is to place him in a more President and GEN. Free Trade and Protection.

Free trade in its unlimited sense, such free trade as is preached by the most vociferous of its advocates, means dependence upon foreign sources for everything that can be produced abroad cheaper than it can be made at home. It means death to the manufacturing and mechanical interests of the country, and the conversion of the enterprising mechanics, who now add so much industrial wealth of the nation, into agriculturists. It means a glut in the market of all the agricultural products, and consequent low gether, invariably, protection and prices and discouragement to those engaged in agriculture. It means exposure to sudden deprivation of those necessaries of life for which we rely upon foreign sources, at any time our foreign relations become disturbed, and consequent large advance in their price, and distress resulting from diminished supply.

Protection, on the contrary does not imply prohibition, as its opponents, many of them, unfairly claim. means only the proper adjustment of tariffs so that we can compete with foreign producers in all those industries, which may, with moderate encouragement, thrive here, and for which we pos essequal natural advantages with foreign competitors. It means protection to labor against forced competition with the cheap labor of Europe. It means opportunity for those whose natural genius leads them into other fields of industry than agriculture, to develop that genius and thus add to the mental wealth of the

Thrice thus, with the tariffs of 1828, 1842 and 1860 has protection redeemed the country from almost ruin. Thrice thus under the revenue tariffs of 1817, 1834 and 1860, has it been sunk so low that none could be found "so poor as to do it reverence." Such having been our experience been supposed that the question wo'd be regarded now as settled, yet do we find among us, men in office and out of office, secretaries and senators, own-

The best way to convince them is to point them to the indisputable fact that when such goods have hithertoadvanced in price under the genial influence of protection, their ability to purchase has always advanced in a greater ratio from the consequent increase in the value of farm products. We trust farmers will not permit themselves to be deceived in this matter. Let them judge of the present and the future by the past, which sheds a clear and unmistakable light upon this subject, and in the history of which stand yoked to prosperity, free trade and disaster .--
