Liming and Salting Hay.

There was, last season, a great deal said about liming hay, and the conclusion arrived at seemed to be that liming was of substantial benefit. There were several opinions, however, of an opposite character, still the bulk of the testimony was in the affirmative.

Time, it is claimed, will preserve the hay perfectly, though hoarded when quite green; and that it will come out in the winter and spring sweet, clean, and of good color, and is often greedily by stock, there being no interference by the lime with its nutritious quality.

A farmer in Illinois experimented with the use of lime last year, and was highly pleased with the result. He took two loads of very green timothy and blue-grass, which he put in the middle of the mow of hay in his barn, and marking the place where it was stored, he sprinkled over it, as it was put in, about one peck of air-slacked lime to the ton, and the hay came out bright and green, and much better than that which had been thoroughly cured before hauling in.

As it is believed that much of the value of the hay crop is taken away from it by the long exposure to the sun in drying it perfectly, there may be some real value in liming process, of which the farmer should have the benefit. We should like to have the views of those who have experimented with the lime, by which, we may arrive at the facts.

Salting hay has been practiced as long as we can remember, but it was done only when the weather made it necessary to house the hay when not fully cured. It was supposed to possess curative properties, as well as to ward off any danger from spontaneous combustion! It is not, however, by modern farmers considered to be of any value in either respect, but to make the hay more palatable to cattle. If hay is sufficiently and properly cured when put away in good dry barns, there need be but little apprehension of its not coming out clean and bright in the spring. Indeed, some farmers think that salt is injurious instead of beneficial, in making the hay to sweat far more than it otherwise would, and this additional moisture causing the hay to mold. We have heard of more than one instance of this, and we have no doubt of its correctness. — Gen. Telegraph.

LIVE CATTLE WEIGHED BY MEASURE.—The only instrument necessary is a measure with feet and inch marks upon it. The girth is the circumference of the animal just behind the shoulder blades. The length is the distance from the shoulder blades—The superficial feet are obtained by multiplying the girth and length.—The following table contains the rule to ascertain the weight of the animal.

If less than one foot in girth, multiply superficial feet by eight.

If less than three and more than one, multiply superficial feet by eleven.

If less than five and more than three, multiply superficial feet by sixteen.

If less than seven and more than five, multiply superficial feet by twenty-five.

If less than nine and more than seven, multiply superficial feet by thirty-three.

If less than eleven and more than nine, multiply superficial feet by forty-five.

Example: suppose a pig to measure in girth two feet, and length one foot nine inches. There would then be three and a half feet, which multiplied by eleven, gives thirty-eight and a half pounds as the weight of the animal when dressed. In this way the weight of the four quarters can be substantially ascertained during life. — Southern Cultivator.

HOG WISDOM.—A Chester Co., Pa., correspondent of the Southern Planter and Farmer says:—

No animals deteriorate faster than swine. The trough is a great element in the character of a hog; he is amazingly like a dandy. To keep him in first rate trim, he soon eats his head off; yet, if he has to hunt his food, even with the slightest effort, he soon becomes too enterprising to be a fine specimen. As soon as a pig becomes enterprising, he ceases to be a "Chester county White." Dame Nature soon fits him to this new order of things; his nose lengthens, the disposition to use it also increases, his legs grow longer, his sides flatten, his hams lose their plumpness, and in one or two generations he is a match in a race for any ordinary dog.

If you want to keep up the breed of good hogs, keep no more than you can keep so lazy they will not grant.

BUSBY PASTURES, or those on which bushes of various kinds are gradually encroaching, may be nearly cleared in one or two seasons by feeding down with sheep. Cut the brush with a bush-hook, or scythe, and soon after turn the sheep in. They will know down the succulent young growth. Kill the roots of the bushes, and thrive upon the diet. It is best, however, to decidedly overstock the pasture for the most thorough work, the animals being kept on but a few days at a time through the hot season.

Thinning Out Fruit

It may be considered somewhat early to make suggestions on the subject of thinning out fruit, but it can never be too early to give good advice, and we think that as pear and peach trees are beginning to show their product, the thinning out process may be begun at almost any time.

It is true the operation can be performed conveniently only upon such trees that are not over large. But it should be especially attended to in young trees, which frequently overbear, to the great injury of the health of the trees, as well as the quality of the fruit. To obtain the finest specimens of pears, they should not be allowed to grow in clusters or in contact with each other, and all that exhibit the least imperfection should be removed. What is lost in number will be doubly made up in size and flavor. This should be remembered. Many persons regard the thinning out of peaches, pears, and apples as so much loss; but they are not judges of fruit, and have no knowledge of its proper culture. They want as large a crop as possible, letting the quality take care of itself, no matter how much the tree is damaged and what effect it may have on the following year's crop.

On some of our own pear trees last year we removed three-fourths of the entire crop, and afterward found the tree to contain more than was advisable.

It goes hard with some people to diminish the quantity of fruit upon their trees. Sometimes they plead want of time; but this is not admissible, for if they have not time to attend to the proper cultivation of fruit, they should abandon it altogether.—The real cause is their greediness.—You can't make them believe that they are the gainers by destroying a portion of the crop, saying that nature is the best judge as to the quantity of fruit. Such persons have no practical knowledge of fruit-raising, the sooner they give it up the better it will be for them, their pockets and reputation. — Gen. Telegraph.

Clover and Timothy.

A. Hadley, in a communication to the Northwestern Farmer, gives what he regards their most important reasons why clover should always be grown with timothy. First, the clover being tap rooted penetrates deeply, stands drouth, mellows the soil, and the timothy grows much stronger and holds up the clover. Secondly, if sown for pasture the timothy almost universally prevents the clover from swelling the cattle. Thirdly, hay is too binding, especially for cattle, and clover too watery (succulent), hence both together are better either alone. To these the Country Gentleman adds, under the head of the first, that where grass comes in a rotation, it is of the utmost importance on a clay soil that at least a part of this grass crop be clover. It will serve to mellow and loosen the heavy soil in a remarkable degree, so that when turned over with a plough it will not only be rich, but loose and friable. If, on the other hand, timothy alone is sown, (which some do because the hay sells better,) the sod will turn over heavy and clammy and be unfit for any crop which is to follow. The same correspondent says that he is partial to rye for calf or sheep pasture, which he occasionally sows in the summer or autumn after a crop of corn; and then, after pastured, it is turned under for a crop of corn, if the soil be strong enough—or it may be allowed to go to harvest. — Mass. Ploughman.

To Destroy Rats and Mice.—One of the surest and most available poisons for this purpose is carbonate of baryta, a dry, white tasteless powder, adapted to mingle with any liquid.—In using it mix it with good dripping meal, or beat it with the raw flesh of a fish, so as to make it a relishing paste for them to eat. If it be used for the destruction of troublesome rats, take a piece of raw fish and rub the powder well into it with a stick. Care must be taken to place the bait that only the vermin intended to be destroyed by it shall have access to it, as it is a deadly poison, alike destructive to dogs and any animals that will eat the preparations of which it forms a component part. Always burn the baits that have been set over night, as the surviving vermin will seldom touch that which has been hauled about by those who have feasted upon and been destroyed by it.—Heath and Home.

SALT AND WATER IN PASTURES.—If animals at pasture can drink when ever they wish, they will never take a great deal at a time. But if they drink only twice or three times a day, they will frequently swallow surprising quantities, and we cannot believe this healthy. Animals will lick salt twice a day, or every day or two, if it is always within their reach, but if it is given occasionally they must not be allowed to take all they wish at once.

CORNS.—One teaspoonful of tar, one of coarse brown sugar, and one of saltpetre. The whole of them warmed together. Spread it on kid leather the size of the corns and in two days they will be drawn out.

PASTURES.—Be careful not to overstock those pastures depended upon for the summer. Top-dressings of bone-dust, guano, ashes, gypsum, super-phosphate, or fish manure, will tell at once.

THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND WILD PIGEONS were shipped east one day last week from Oakfield, Wisconsin.

SEWING MACHINE.

AMERICAN BUTTON-HOLE OVER-SEAMING AND SEWING MACHINE COMBINED.

MEDAL AWARDED AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION, 1887.

In directing attention to the celebrated COMBINATION BUTTON-HOLE AND SEWING MACHINE, we feel fully warranted in claiming for its superiority over every other of its class as a Family Machine.—The Simplicity, Ease and Certainty with which it operates, as well as the uniform excellence of its work, certainly place it far in advance of any other similar invention of the age.

It is also the cheapest, intrinsically, as well as the best, since it is really two machines combined in one. (By a simple and beautiful mechanical arrangement never before accomplished by human ingenuity,) making either the Lock Stitch or Button Hole Stitch, as occasion may require. It is, at the same time, simple in construction, comparatively noiseless, easily understood, and, in a word, it combines with those advantages peculiarly its own the most desirable qualities of all others, for it not only does every variety of sewing in a superior manner, but in addition over-seams splendidly and makes beautiful Buttons and Pearl Buttons in all fabrics. This is far beyond the capacity of any other machine.

The essential mechanism of this Machine, and the superior skill workmanship and materials employed in its construction, are a guarantee of accuracy, strength and durability, and enable the company and its agents to warrant every Machine they sell to give entire satisfaction.

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN ON THE MACHINE GRATUITOUSLY.

Lessons may be taken if desired with a view to test the Machine, or to become better acquainted with it before deciding to purchase. Samples of work will be furnished upon application at
