Management of Young Orchards.
Mr. Henry H. Crapo, of Michigan, in a late number of the Country Gentleman, in discussing the management of young orchards, makes these remarks:

It will be conceded, I think, that the ultimate value of an orchard depends upon the healthy and vigorous growth of the trees while young—until, at least, their habits of growth, &c., become fully developed. As an apple tree can no more make such growth without proper care and treatment than any other plant, it becomes a question of serious consideration what these should be; for an orchard of stunted, dwarfed and sickly trees upon a farm is not only an unsightly object, but a valueless encumbrance.

The better course of treatment for an orchard of young trees, undoubtedly, is to cultivate the ground constantly with roots until they shall have attained a considerable size, during which the fertility of the soil should not only be kept up but increased by a liberal application of manure. Where this cannot be done, the next best method will be to seed down the ground exclusively with clover. This will not make a stiff, compact sward, like fine grasses, so detrimental to the growth of young trees, but will keep the land open and porous, as well as serve to enrich it.

When the clover shows indications of "running out," put in the plow and turn under the sward. The ground, for one season at least, should then be cultivated with some kind of root crop, to be followed again by clover. But if this is not practicable, then after being thoroughly plowed and worked over, clover should again be sown upon it—clover following clover.

In the meantime the ground immediately about the trees, should be kept constantly shaded and manured to a distance equal, at least, to the diameter of the head of the tree—and the farther the better.

By this course the land will yield a fair return in clover crops, and at the same time will be constantly increasing in fertility; and in a few years the owner will find himself in possession of an orchard of healthy, vigorous and well developed bearing trees—not only one of the greatest ornaments to his farm, but a source of enjoyment, profit and real worth.

Watering Horses.

Horses should never be kept so long without water that they will drink largely when they get it. Give it to them often, and they will never injure themselves with it. Nothing is more common than to hitch a team to a plow and make them work half a day without a drop. What man would submit to such a treatment? If the plow is started at seven in the morning, water should be given again before ten; and again in the afternoon at four o'clock. Even if half an hour is consumed, more work will be done in a day. The objection that horses on the road should not be loaded with water is not valid. A horse weighing twelve hundred will not be much encumbered additionally by twenty lbs. of water, while the detention will give him additional strength. Every farmer knows that when he himself undertakes to lift a large log or heavy stone he can do more by first inflating himself with air, and not unfrequently, he loses a button or two from his pantaloons in the operation. Some degree of inflation by water will add to the horse's strength in a similar manner. In driving a horse on the road, at a natural gait of nine or ten miles an hour, I have frequently had occasion to observe that he was laboring with perspiration until I let him drink freely, when he ceased to sweat, and evidently traveled more freely.—Don't be afraid to give your horse water; the danger is in making them abstain too long, in which case care is needed.

TINNING.—Articles of copper and brass can be tinned with great facility by the use of a solution of the "salt on tin," (a chloride,) in ten parts of water, and adding to it a second solution made of caustic potash, also in ten parts of water. The clouded mixture soon becomes clear and when completely transparent is ready for use, until which time it is to be kept in well closed glass bottles. For use, the mordant is to be heated in a vessel and a tin plate of considerable surface is to be suspended in it. The article to be tinned is then to be dipped in the vessel, from which it may be removed after a few minutes, and it will be found to be covered with a uniform silvery white coating.

COMMON steel may, it is claimed, be endowed with the properties of the finest cast metal, and when burned be brought back to its original condition, by the use of a tempering liquid invented by a French locksmith. His bath is prepared by adding two pounds of hydrochloric acid, 300 grains nitric acid (specific gravity 1.334), 325 grains of sulphate of zinc and about three ounces of tripoli to about four gallons of water. A piece of cast iron weighing about three ounces is to be placed in this liquid and allowed to remain twenty-four hours, when it is ready for use.

COMPLETION OF THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.
GREAT RUSH TO STERNBERG'S.
Sung to the Tune of Yankee Doodle.
The Great Pacific Railroad's laid, From ocean unto ocean, And now complete connection's made,— An enterprising nation.

The mighty work at last is done, So speedily and brisk, oh! And now in ten days can run From here to San Francisco.

No more we take the ancient route, The stage, a horrid slow thing; It banged the passengers about, And wore out all their clothing.

Chorus, for the end of each verse:
The Great Pacific Railroad's laid, From ocean unto ocean, And we buy clothes from A. STERNBERG, A most delightful notion.

Through passengers by the Pacific Railroad will call at the store of A. Sternberg, before purchasing, and give themselves with a complete outfit of the elegant and substantial Spring and Summer Clothing, the very best assortment of which will always be found at A. Sternberg's Store.

People who travel by other routes, and all so people who, instead of traveling by any route at all, prefer to stay at home, can find the most superior and seasonable garments, for every occasion, of every variety, and at the lowest prices.

Do not fail to call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere; if you do not, we are sure you will be sorry that you did not. Our goods are put down to the lowest figure. We sell whole suits, according to quality.
RANGING FROM $6.50 TO $18.00—the very best.
