WEDNESDAY MORNING Aug. 25 '69.
The Poor Farmer.

We saw the other day in one of our exchanges, a little paragraph with this heading, in which it was justly said that a "poor farmer cannot conceal the fact that he is a poor farmer." Nothing can be truer. His work lies before the world. Every passer can look upon it and record his judgement. There are his house, his barn, his out buildings, his implements, his horses and cattle. If he is a poor farmer it will be seen in all these. His very house and barn-yard speak of his want of industry and thrift, in clear language. Yet there is no one more difficult to instruct or reform than the man who is determined to pursue his own wretched course, in the face of all his neighbors and the whole community. And there are two reasons for first. First, he loves the rum bottle; and if not this, then he is naturally lazy and a poor devil generally. In either case he has no future to live and work for; no pride or self respect. If he is spoken to on the subject he replies that he thinks his mode of managing his farm the best; he was a farmer bred, his father a farmer before him; and he has nothing to learn from the jimerack course of modern days, by which, though the land may yield more, the cost in making it do so is far more than what he loses. As to his implements, when they are worn-out, he may think about getting others, but sees no use in throwing tools away that answer well enough. As to his house and garden, they are the same his father had, and if they were good enough for his father, what right had he to complain?—He has little to send to market, and that a kind neighbor takes and sells for him. Ask him why he does not raise more for marketing, and he replies that it does not pay; the time and expense consumed in going to market, the wear and tear of horses and wagons, come to more than what can be made out of it. He has reckoned it out and knows. If asked why he does not substitute a different variety of corn, oats, or other grain, for that from which he derives only half a crop, he replies that he gets along well enough with what he has, and it is adapted to his land, while new sorts may not be.

Everything is managed or mismanaged in the same way. Look at the broken shavings of his hay-wagon; his cart with a wooden hitch-pin in one of the axles; the wheel-barrow with one leg; the roller, plow and harrow exposed all the year round to the weather, and some of them still lying where they were last used; the gears tied up with twine; the barnyard fence broken and the cattle roaming through the meadows and tearing to pieces his couple of poor hay-stacks; the hogs rooting up the orchard and eating up the roots of the remaining grass; the fence in front of the house blown over by the wind three or four months ago and still lying there; the approach to the house thick with mud; coal-ashes, flat stones or boards are to be seen. Everything indeed is in keeping, and however unpublishing and even painful it may be to others, and however impossible it may seem to others, that the poor farmer cannot but see it and deplore it, too, though helpless to improve it, is not so. He does not see it. He will not know it. He likes it as it is!—Germantown Tel.

The Trees do Not Bear.

Several letters are at hand stating that the writers have trees of such and such varieties, planted so and so long, but which do not bear, and asking what is the matter. A tree goes on making a growth of wood for a greater or less number of years, according to the variety. At length the buds, which might have prolonged into branches, take on a new development, and bear flowers and fruit. In the natural course of things, the time when this change will take place is governed mainly by the character of the soil. In a very fertile soil, the tree will make wood, in preference to forming fruit, for a longer period than it will in a poorer one. In orchards, the tendency to form wood is checked when the trees have attained a sufficient size, by seeding down to grass. Whatever checks the growth of the tree, and threatens its life, has a tendency to throw it into fruiting. The time required for different varieties to come into bearing varies greatly, and this is a point on which our fruit books are very deficient in information. Some varieties of pears, for instance, will bear in two or three years from the bud, while with others one must wait for eight or ten years; and it is so with apples. With varieties which are naturally late in coming into bearing, our advice is to wait; but where a tree, which should bear, does not give fruit when at a reasonable age, we should root prune. The best time to do this is in the spring. Dig a trench around the tree, at a distance of one foot from it, for each inch of the diameter of the trunk, i. e., a tree three inches through will have a trench forming a circle six feet in diameter. Dig down, and with a very sharp spade cut off every root that extends beyond the trench. There are modes of summer pruning to induce fruitfulness, but these can be applied to only a few trees, while root-pruning can be readily applied on the large scale.

The greatest of men live unseen to view, while thousands are not qualified express their influences.

ARE PRACTICAL WORKMEN.
Sewing Machine.
THE SINGER SEWING MACHINE.
Among sewing machines, those made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, rank with the best. Their manufacturing machines, have long been known as the best for manufacturing purposes. But within the past few years, they have given special attention to the production of a FAMILY MACHINE,
destined to win much favor in the HOUSEHOLD.
The machine which they now offer is quiet, light-running, simple, fast, noiseless. Its accessories for HEMMING, BRAIDING, BINDING, QUILTING, TUCKING, CORDING, FELLING, GATHERING, are simple and easily understood. Its delicate work enduring and tireless muscles of iron and steel, do all the work noiselessly, better, and few will deny, "Easier than hand can do it." They urge those wishing to purchase a machine, to examine all the other machines before buying, as it will, for itself, overcome all the objections to the other machines that can be brought against it. Machines on hand for sale and exhibition, together with a full and complete assortment of SILK, TWIST, LINEN, OR COTTON THREAD, and all the accessories for the machines, by
