WEDNESDAY MORNING Nov. 17 '69.
From the Atlantic Almanac for 1870.
Farm Yard Song.

Over the hill the farm boy goes,
His shadow lengthens along the land,
A plant staff in his hand;
In the poplar tree, above the spring,
The X-rayed begins to sing:

The early dews are falling,
Into the stone-heap darts the milk;
The swallows skim the river brink;
And home to the woodcock flies the crow.
When over the hill the farm boy goes,
Cheerily calling,
"Co' boss! co' boss! co' co' co'!"

Father, father, over the hill,
Faintly calling, calling still,
"Co' boss! co' boss! co' co' co'!"

Into the yard the farmer goes,
With gentle heart at the close of day;
Harness and chains are hung away;
In the wagon shed stand yoke and plow;
The straw's in the stack, the hay in the mow.

The cooling dews are falling;
The friendly sheep; his welcome bleat,
The pigs come grunting to his feet,
The whistling mare her master knows,
When into the yard the farmer goes,
His cattle calling,
"Co' boss! co' boss! co' co' co'!"

While still the cow boy, far away,
Goes seeking those that have gone stray,
"Co' boss! co' boss! co' co' co'!"

Now to her task the milkmaid goes,
The cattle e'en crowding through the gate,
Loving, pushing, little and great;
About the trough by the farm-yard pump,
The frolicsome yearling frisk and jump.

While the pleasant dews are falling;
The new milk heifer is quick and shy,
But the old cow waits with tranquil eye;
And the white stream into the bright pail
drips,

When to her task the milkmaid goes,
Soothingly calling—
"So, boss! so, boss! so! so! so!"

The cheerful milkmaid takes her stool,
And sits and milks in the twilight glow,
Saying "So, boss! so, boss! so!"

To supper at last the farmer goes,
The apples are pared, the paper read,
The stories are told, then all to bed,
Without the crickets' ceaseless song
Make chirr the elms all night long;

The heavy dews are falling,
The housewife's hand has turned the lock,
Drowsily ticks the kitchen clock;
The household sinks to deep repose,
But still is sleep the farm boy goes,
Singing, calling—
"Co' boss! co' boss! co' co' co'!"

And off the milkmaid, in her dreams,
Drums on the pail with the flashing stream,
Murmuring, "So, boss! so!"

Fattening Hogs—The Process of Fattening Increased by Making Them Greater Eaters.

When hogs are fairly on their way of being fattened, receiving several times a day all the food they can eat, the more they can be made to eat the faster they will fatten, and the more profit the farmer will derive from the food given them and consumed.

There was once a strife in a certain neighborhood of good farmers as to who should annually have the fattest hog. Each one took a pig of the same litter, so that they all started alike. But somehow it turned out that one certain man always came out ahead.

This constant victory excited wonder and curiosity. But at last the secret leaked out. This farmer was in the habit of giving his pig all it could eat and then turning into his pen another hungry pig, which of course would commence eating voraciously, which would arouse into action the sluggish appetite of the other pig, and he would turn in, eating with eagerness, and resolutely competing with the hungry pig.

By this means, the hog that was being fattened was stuffed several times a day to repletion.

Now, we have found by experience that there is another way in which a hog can be induced to eat much more than he otherwise would, and consequently be made to lay on fat very fast. Let a hog be fed, for instance, all he can eat of corn in the ear. Then fill his trough half full of clean water, and strew into it three or four quarts of shelled corn, and it will be found that the hog's appetite will come to him again, and this additional amount of food will also be consumed.

It is generally the case that those hogs that do not take on fat very rapidly are poor eaters, and it is an object of importance, worthy of the farmer's attention, to make them full eaters.

Every fattening hog, which is really thriving satisfactorily, will always denote that by his peculiar snuffing and difficult breathing just after eating all he will eat. And perhaps it will be found that even scrub hogs, about which so much complaint is made for their shyness in taking fat, can be made to give much more satisfaction if some more effectual means are taken to make them greater eaters.

WHAT TO DO WITH POTATOES.—A correspondent of the Western (Chicago) Rural says he "didn't like the idea of hauling potatoes fifteen miles to market and selling them for twenty-five cents, a bushel," so he commenced feeding them to his hogs, and found that when boiled, mashed and mixed in the proportion of three bushels of potatoes and one of bran, but fat-hogs, not only ate it ravenously but fattened up better than upon corn alone.

He added, however, a few ears of corn. This plan of feeding is of long standing in this region, and has been pursued with uniform success, with, however, this difference the proportion of corn is larger. Hogs are very fond of boiled potatoes, and broken and mixed with half the quantity of bran double the quantity of corn, as suggested by the correspondent aforesaid, will fatten upon it better perhaps than any other food.

Hints for Housekeepers.

Mr. Roger Smith, an English writer, in the course of a lengthy paper on "The duties of an Architect," gives the following as a few of the points to be thought of in the planning of a dwelling:

"The relative position of each room in connection with all the others; the aspect of the windows; the communications, such as the hall, the corridors and the staircase must be arranged for. Each room must be of the right size, shape and disposition. In every main living room the ordinary articles of furniture must be prepared for, and places assigned them, and the same in every bedroom large or small.

The position of the window, door and fireplace in each room must be settled so as to avoid draughts, discomfort and smoky chimneys. Light must be secured for every hole and corner all over the house, and so much ventilation. The service from the kitchen must be so provided as to bring the provision into the dining-room readily, but to keep smells out. The duty of every servant all over the house must be understood, and all the end-uses must be provided for, and the appliances of a large house thought of. There must be a place found for the range, and the hot-plate, and the jack and the dresser, and the closets, and the shelves of the kitchen. The shelves, sinks and plate-racks, the copper and washing-boards, the vegetable bins and the water-supply of the scullery, must be all provided for. Care must be taken of the winter-cellar, beer-cellar, and (if present) the stores, the linen the china and the plate. Ovens, shelves, books, safes, plate-closets, linen-closets, housemaid's closets, baths, hot water, cold water, cupboards, lifts, and all manner of appliances are to be thought of; rooms for the family and rooms for the guests; the nurseries, the upper-servants' rooms, the various services of butler, cook, housekeeper, footman, dairymaid, stillroom maid, must all be thought of, all planned for; all must be brought compactly together, and each must be kept out of the other's way. While these matters are being disposed of, there are also many points in the structure that need attention in preparing working plans. Proper foundations must be provided for, and an equal distribution of the weights on the walls. The flues must be carried up into proper chimneys stalks the construction of bremsumers, girders, floors, partitions, roofs, etc., must be devised. The arrangement of the roofing, so as to be easily freed from snow, the mode of bringing away rain water, the drainage, the outfall or cesspool for the drains, the necessary precaution against damp, had smells or tainted water, each and all of these come under review; not one of them can be left to chance any more than the putting together of the masonry or the brickwork, the thickness of walls, the quality of glass, or the weight of lead. All this time an entirely distinct set of considerations is also present to the architect's mind: his building is to please the eye as well as to accommodate the dwellers therein, and, whether there be the richest elaboration, or the most rigid simplicity, he will not have fulfilled his duty to his employer, or been loyal to the art, if he has not striven to render the effect of his house, especially the inside of his house, pleasing, harmonious and appropriate."

FALL PLANTING OF TREES.—A correspondent asks us at what time in the fall he should transplant trees. We answer, any time after the tree is done growing for the season—but the sooner the better. The moment it can be seen from the leaves that the season's growth is over, the transplantation of trees should be attended to. By so doing the roots will have time to become established before severe weather sets in, and be ready to make an early healthy start when spring opens. Some of our leading horticulturists assert that the roots of trees grow all winter, except when the ground becomes deeply frozen; but whether this be so or not, transplanting as early in the autumn as circumstances will admit of, doubtless has its advantages.—Germantown Telegraph.

AFTER DINNER NAPS.—The Herald of Health says: "Many persons are in the habit of sleeping for half an hour or an hour immediately after dinner. This is a bad practice. Ten minutes sleep before dinner is worth more than an hour after. It rests and refreshes and prepares the system for vigorous digestion. If sleep is taken after dinner it should be in a sitting posture, as the horizontal position is unfavorable to healthful digestion. Let those who need rest and sleep during the day take it before dinner instead of after, and they will soon find that they feel better, and that their digestion will be improved thereby."

HOW TO MAKE SHINGLES LAST.—Silas Brown says that twenty-five years ago, he dipped shingles in a large kettle of lime wash to which salt had been added, and the whole kept boiling. A few of the shingles were dipped in all over at a time, long enough to soak them well, and then thrown aside to dry. In a short time all the shingles were thus prepared. Although what are termed "sap shingles," they have lasted twenty-five years, "and may do so for years to come." Several experiments of a similar character have been made since, with very successful results.—Albany Cultivator.
