Original Poetry.

Writes Expressly for the Republican THOUGHTS.

By J. G. LONDON.

A youth is sitting alone in the night,
And gazing aloft to the stars so bright,
Thinking of home and those who, when there
In boyish years, unknown of care,
But a year steals o'er those bright dark eyes,
As he sadly gazes, in those bright dark eyes,
For they hold to his heart in saddest bow,
Thoughts, that beam'd brightest, long long ago.

A maiden is seated in halls of pleasure,
And the bright glitter of earthly treasure;
Yawning, her heart seems weary of noise
That mingles itself with earthly joys
She thinks of home and those who, when there
In boyish years, unknown of care,
But a year steals o'er those bright dark eyes,
As he sadly gazes, in those bright dark eyes,
For they hold to his heart in saddest bow,
Thoughts, that beam'd brightest, long long ago.

To always dwell in such saddened thought,
A lingering man borne down by age,
Sits reading news, life's dreary page;
The bright golden hours of days gone by,
Brings visions of love to his fading eye, Finds, that these saddest, fall from his sky.

And hid their loved forms in the silent clay,
Ye he, of all, still wanders alone,
While those he loved, forever has flown.

Thus it is always on life's stormy river,
Our thoughts float o'er us, e'er and ever;
Bringing sad memories back to our heart,
That life had bid, forever to part,
The young and the old alike is given,
Through realms of mind, a view of Heaven,
Through friends of our young may dwell in the sky.

We often can view them in memories eyes.

Original Poetry.

Writes Expressly for the Republican THOUGHTS.

By J. G. LONDON.

There, says I, is some one anxious to subscribe for the El Paso Journal, so I entered in a loud voice, "Come in."
She was dressed in a pair of store boots, and an iron grey set of spectacles, and she walked up to me with majesty in her gait. I knew who it was the very minute
I set my eyes on her.

It was a woman.

I gracefully arose and said: "How are you, ma'am? you were wishing to subscribe to the El Paso Journal" at the same time dipping my pen in the ink, and opening my subscription book. This she did not get her thought.

She fixed her glassy eyes on me, and said: "Young man, are you an advocate for the holy laws of woman's rights?"

"No, ma'am," said I, "I am a Pro-by-terian."

"Are you," she said, "prepared to embrace with us over the sea with equal suffrage?"

"Ma'am," said I, "I have not got no objection to taking a quiet walk with you, provided the boat ain't leaky, and you'll do the rowing."

A smile pursued her features for a moment, and she said, "I'm willing to do it for the rowing."

"Yes," said I, in a polite and offending manner, "I'll only cost you two dollars, and we'll send it to any address for an entire year."

"-Ev' you'd a wife?" she asked.

"-I've," said I, wondering what she was coming at. "So that you see I couldn't marry you if I wanted to ever so much." I threw this in as a soberer.

"-Are you willing that she should share with you the burden and trial of life?"

"-I ain't willing perlickin'," said I, "an
'I'll let her shoulder the whole of
'em if she has a hankerin' that way?"

"-Wood you consent that she should go to the poles?" said she.

"-She can go where she please," said I.
"-She generally does."

"-I've a'n't a hole-souled man," said she,
and then "her arms around my neck and I will."

"-Get out," said I, "what are you up to?
I ain't one of them men."

After much labor, I succeeded in unloosening her hand and sitting her down on a chair, I judged from her conduct that she stood in need of a few moral observations.

"-You air an impulsive fellow," said I.
"-Your nature is at once spontaneous and outbreakin'. You need a pair of marin gals. Consider what would be your state of a man's wife was to catch you hug-gin' him in this style."

She wiped her face with her dress -
She had on a dress. I forgot to mention the fact in speakin' of her spectacles.
"-I am a worker in the cause of woman's rights."

"-Yes," said I, "you air you ought!
I'd be a-hamed of yourself. I should judge you was one of them lobby women that the Chicago Tribune correspondent tells us. But ever me. I am sealed against
'em."

"-I should be pleased," she said, "to go arm in arm with you to the poles."

"-No you don't," said I, in alarm;
"-Not if I have anything to say in the matter. I won't go with you - not a single damned pole."

"-Young man," said she, "has'th you children?"

"-I've; seven of 'em. Can you show me good a record?"
