

Management of Young Trees in Sum-

One reason, undoubtedly, why many trees fail the first season after transplating is, that their roots were not mudded on being sent out Caps, and numerous kinds of useful and fancy artifrom the nursery. Every nurseryman should keep a barrel or puddle of mud, in constant readiness for coating over the roots of trees which are to be moved any distance, and are in danger of becoming dry in the transportation. This coating not only preserves the moisture of the roots while out of the ground, but also helps to form an immediate contact between the soil and the roots when they are set out .-Where this mudding or "puddling" has been neglected, it is important, in planting, to press the fine soil among all the fibres, and to fill up every cavity. Ind. d, this should always be done. It is not enough to shovel in the dirt over the roots and tread it down with the foot. Get down on your knees, and work the soil into every interstice with your fingers. Are you too rheumatic, or have you too stiff a backbone for such work? then bring a pail of water and dash it on the roots when the hole is about halffilled, to wash in the earth, and then put in the rest of the soil.

But it somtimes happens that trees, however well planted, suffer from drouth in Summer .-Watering them is only a temporary relief, and it often does as much harm as good. Thrown upon the top of the ground, only a little penetrates to the roots, and the surface soon becomes baked into a hard crust, which no moderate rain nor any dew can soften. If watering is resorted to-and it is sometimes necessarythe surface soil should be removed with a hoe, and a pail or half a pail of water poured into the cavity at the end of the roots, and then the top soil returned to its place. The roots are thereby refreshed, and the earth above them is kept mellow. But instead of repeating such the cavity at the end of the roots, and then the waterings, we would mulch the soil around each tree with tan-bark or sawdust, or leaves, with a few stones to keep them in place. The strawy portion of the manure-heap is a good mulch, imparting richness about the roots as the rain washes in the manure. Be sure that the mulching extends as far as the extremitics of the roots. A good cultivator once said that, in his experience, the best mulcher was a longpronged hoe, by which he kept the soil about his trees clean and mellow. Perhaps he was right; but most farmers cannot find time to cultivate their trees so carefully; and for such, a good mulching, such as we have mentioned, is the best thing they can do .- American Agri-

ABOUT WEEDS .- Do you ask where the weeds are? Sorry to say, in your plowed fields, your meadows and pastures, and garden. See! right in plain sight, in yonder pasture, thistles flourish bravely, both the native American and the foreigner, mulleins, docks, white daisies, Johnswort and wheat not. Havn't time to grub them up? Perhaps you havn't time to exterminate them all, root and branch, in one year ; but you can make a beginning on them. Every farmer ought to feel a little ashamed, or at least uneasy, if he is not gaining some headway against this invading army. He ought to be able to say, at the end of every season, that he owns more free territory than he did at the beginning. And if he can not root out all the weeds in one year, or two years, he ought to exterminate some of them, and to let none go to seed. Did you ever stop and think what gross feeders these invaders are? They carry off annualty a great amount of nourishment which ought ty a great amount of nourishment which ought lo have been saved for the benefit of your wheat, corn, potatoes, and the like. Thirty or forty dollars worth is annually lost on some farms that we know of. Lost, and worse than lost! How these farmers would murmur against the same of the save farmers would murmur against the same of the save farmers would murmur against the save farmers with the save farmer with the save farmer and the save farmers with the save How these farmers would murmur against Providence, if a flood, or hail-storm, or drouth, caused them a loss of half that amount! But they take the damage from their own carelessness very quietly.

Now, let us speak a word in season. Grub up at once, the roots of every weed you can find time for; and if you can not kill all, be sure to prevent their ripening seed. Set that down as a rule power to be violated. Now in down as a rule never to be violated, Now, in this very month of August, when every growing thing is hastening to maturity, make an onslaught upon the barbarians. Heap high your trophies on the battle-field; and ere long, fire them, and offer them up as a sacrifice to CERES. It will please the old heathen mightily .- 1b.

A farmer sowing his ground, some dandies came riding along that way, when one of them called to him with an insolent air: "Well, honest fellow, it is your business to sow, but we reap the fruits of your labor."

To which the countryman replied: "It is very likely you may, for I am sowing

A contemporary says: "There is a man up in our country who always pays for his newspaper in advance. He has never been sick a y in his life-never had any corns or the toothacle - his potatoes never rot-the weevil never eats his wheat-the frost never kills his corn or beans-his babies never ery in the night, and bis wife never scolds."
