

Chinese Sugar Cane as Food for Stock.

We find in a Georgia paper, a communication from a correspondent who signs himself F. J. R., and dates Oglethrope county, in that State, Aug. 21, 1858, from which we make the following extract, and ask for it the attention of our readers

This is my third season of cultivating the Chinese cane. I have seven acres of it this years five of which I planted for the express purpose of feeding it green and dry to horses, cattle and hogs; and since the 1st of June, until now, I have been feeding it daily to those animals .-My calves have run daily upon two acres, sown broadcast, since that time. My cows and oxen while sick with the "black tongue" were daily fed with it. My oxen, when at work, are fed upon it, borses ditto. My hogs are daily fed with the cane now, and are in fine growing order. I intend to fatten my pork upon the cane, as not only good feed but equal to corn for the same purpose! These facts can be attested by my neighbors, for they know ail about them .--After three years' experience with the Chinese sugar cane, I have come to the following conclusions in regard to it, and I give them for what they are worth-not earing a "bawbee" whether or not they are endorsed by the peo-

1. For forage, either green or dry, there is no plant so valuable.

2. More grain can be made upon the same land than oats will produce, with an analytic value as food of one-third over oats!

3. For hogs, it is next to coro, in every par-

4. For sirup, it is equal to any cane, and for sugar, ditto!

This is no mere speculation-I have tried the forage, made sirup and sugar, and for the analysis of its value as food, am indebted to Prof. Lee.

There was not nearly as much sugar cane seed planted last spring, as we had supposed there would have been-why, we cannot say , inasmuch, as taken altogether there was never a new thing introduced among us of so much decided value, whether it be regarded as seed and fodder producing, or with a single view to sugar and molasses. In what way the sugar cane has failed to meet the expectations of those who planted it last year, we are unable to say. All that was ever promised for it by to say. All that was ever promised for it by the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, was realised; and yet in our construction of the most sanguine, which is the most sanguine of the most sanguine. excursions into the country, we have not found it cultivated to anything like the extent and uniformity among farmers that we had reason to anticipate. All that we ever recommended was, that it should be grown by farmers in small quantities to supply the domestic demand for molasses, while the fodder and seed would add to its value as a permanent crop, and altogether make it highly desirable upon every farm .- Germantown Telegraph.

the introduction of every good labor-saving machine, and we rejoice to see that the prejudice against such implements is disappearing from the public mind. It is becoming plain to every one, that the substitution of mechanical forces for mere muscular strength tends to elevate mankind. Men are changed by it from mere mechanics to makers and controllers of machines. Instead of going the same round of hard, wearing labor, from generation to generation, like a blind horse in the treadmill, they may now throw very much burdensome toil upon machinery: may subject the powerful but blind forces of nature to the control of the human will. If wood and iron can do much of the drudgery of life just as well as human sinews, surely it is better that they should do it. If, by the aid of a horse and a cultivator, one man can till as much land as ten men with ten hoes could do their work, surely there is a great gain. So with all substitutes for the expenditure of human strength.

To us, the great argument for machinery in agriculture is not its cheapening effect, but the relief it gives the farmer from wasting toil, and the opportunity it affords him for self improvement. Its tendency is to make farming attractive, no less than profitable. Well has a writer observed: "Machinery, regarded as a means to banish man's slavery to toil by substituting brain work for the labor of the hand, is the high road to that fuller and more perfect development of society which poets have painted, philosophers predicted, and revelation, it is believed by many, expressly predicted."- Agriculturist.

SPRAINS .- A gentleman of Collisville, Ill., writes that having a severely sprained ankle, he took a tea-cup full of common salt and a pint of sweet milk, and boiled them together till of the consistency of a poultice, then spread it on a cloth, and bound it round the ankle .-The next morning there was a little weakness but the soreness and lameness had all gone .-Our correspondent says that eider vinegar with salt, is also good, and just as good for horses and cattle as for men, and should be applied in the same way.

Why is a hen setting on a fence like a cow? Because she has a head on one side, and a tail on the other.
