Farming Hints for the Season.
 Farmers are now making preparation to put in their crops. The ground should be well and deeply plowed, to secure a good bed for the spreading of the roots of plants. We often see farmers plow their land in such a careless manner, not plowing more than three or four inches deep, that we cannot see how they can produce anything at all. "What is worth doing at all, is worth doing well" and an additional day in doing work well, may secure an additional wagon load of product. Avoid hasty and superficial plowing, but cut straight, deep, and narrow furrows.

MANURE.—Have you any manure to apply? then draw it out and thoroughly mix it with your soil, and this will render it of double value.

CORN.—Prepare your corn ground well, make it mellow by harrowing and cultivating several times; do not be afraid of losing a few days time at this, it will repay you well; corn spreads its roots very much, if the soil is mellow, and this it cannot do if the soil is hard. See that your seed corn is good by sprouting some in a pot in your window or some other warm place. This may save one or two replantings, and secure your corn from early fall frosts. Plant plenty of seeds, and thin out evenly, and thus avoid the loss of a third of the crop, missing and uneven hills.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.—Also will require your attention at this season, and see that it is well cared for; for a good vegetable garden will be the source of many a good dinner. Do not, from a mistaken notion of economy, that it will not pay for you to spend a few hours for several days during the season, in the garden, compel your wife to dig the garden while the work properly belongs to you, I do not say you should do all the work in the garden. I believe it is quite congenial to the nature of the ladies to plant and take care of seeds and plants, but it is your duty to assist them at least in the rougher part of the work. While you are at it do the work well, spade it deep and make the soil fine and mellow break all the lumps with the spade, and intermix with the soil a full supply of well rotted manure or vegetable compost.

FRUIT GARDEN.—Make a fruit garden, and plant a full supply of strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, &c.

POTATOES WITH CORN.—A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer gives the following as his experience in planting Corn and Potatoes in the same hill.

Having never seen an account in any agricultural paper, of any one having raised potatoes with corn in the same hill, I thought I would try the experiment last spring. I had finished the potatoes that I intended to plant but having some small ones left, I concluded to plant them in the same hills with a patch of corn, and mark the effect. I planted the corn upon the 25th of May, the season being so wet I could not plant them sooner. I dropped the corn and potatoes together, hoed them at the same time, and dug the potatoes soon after cutting up the corn. The ground was not first rate, but the corn was an average crop, full as good as some near by where the corn was planted alone. The potatoes were first rate—never saw finer. I shall try again this spring, and if they do as last year, I shall continue to plant them together. If the two crops do as well together as separate, it makes a great saving of labor to plant them together.

WATERMELON CULTURE.—Mr. James H. Hopkins, of Oneida county, N. Y. in the Country Gentleman, makes the annexed suggestions relative to the culture of the watermelon, and they are worthy of all consideration. Mr. Hopkins says.

There are few people that do not like watermelons; yet we find few of our farmers who grow them with any degree of success in their gardens. I started my seeds in a hot-bed; set them out in a hill dug deep and large, made rich and mellow with sand.

There are three things to be observed and requisite to success in growing watermelons. First, early planting—the hot-bed will help us when the season is late. Second, a deep, rich, well prepared soil. Third, it must be sandy, naturally or artificially. Observe these three requisites, and, with proper care, success is always within your grasp. To illustrate the necessity for a deep, mellow, well-prepared soil, I will mention that I measured roots from a hill of watermelons last autumn which were over nine feet in length.

Brother Jonathan says, "The English ladies who recently lost their lives by their dresses taking fire, were burnt-offerings to the Moloch of Fashion."

A gentleman who died recently bequeathed to his wife a handsome sum; providing in his will that in case she again married the sum was to be doubled!

Dr. Johnson made short work with the tough question of freewill. "Sir," said he to Baswell, "we know our will is free, and there's an end on't."
