"POOR WHITE TRASH."

In a recent issue we denied that Horace Greely, the editor of the New York Tribune ever called poor white people "poor white trash," as charged in the Bedford Gazette .-The Gazette last week reiterates the falsehood, but instead of producing any proof, says that "if Mr. Jordan will bring us (the editors of the Gazette) the files of the Tribune for the last year, we (the editors of the Gazette) will obligate ourselves to show it to him."

Was ever anything meaner than this? The charge was made by the Gazette, and the denial by us; and we demanded the proof. Instead of producing it, the falsehood is repeated, and Mr. Jordan is called on to produce "the files of the Tribune for the last year." Why connect Mr. Jordan in any way with the controversy, when he has nothing to do with it, and very likely had not seen it in either paper ?-If the Gazette had copied his falsehood from the Tribune, as he pretends to have done, why not name or refer to the No. or date of the paper ? Evidently because there is no such paper, and because Greely never used any such language, as his calumniators charge upon him. Mr. Jordan is asked to produce, not some particular paper, or No. of the Tribune, but the files of the last year! How palpable the falsehood, how gross the libel.

the following conclusions:

1st, That the great wheat growing region of the West is univjured.

2d, That later reports-which we have in several instances—will bring better news. 3d, That there is no occasion for a wheat and flour panic.

4th, That corn, potatoes, and garden vegetables-if no further disasters happen-will be abundant, though a month later in yield.

5th, That there will be a fair supply of the most valuable of all fruits, apples, and a tole-rable show of less indispensable fruits and berries.

6th, That those who purchase flour and wheat at high panic rates, will regret it before September.

Every journalist will testify that while every disaster affecting the crops is invariably pubed and exaggerated, anything tending to reduce prices is passed over in solemn silence. Everybody knows who has lived in the country, what a remarkably cheerful body of men ers are, how invariably the weather suits them, how sanguine are their anticipations of good crops—in short, to drop the ironical, how prone they are to keep up, even to themselves, representations which may tend to raise prices. When we consider the precarious nature of crops, and how a few degrees change in the thermometer may destroy the hopes of months, this is natural enough. But the country at large should in ail cases know the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."
