

BEDFORD INQUIRER.

BEDFORD INQUIRER.

BEDFORD, Pa.

Friday Morning, Nov. 15, 1861.

"FEARLESS AND FREE."

D. OVER—Editor and Proprietor.

CASH TERMS.

On account of the hardness of the times and the pressing demands for cash upon us, we have determined to come as near to cash terms as possible.

INFORMATION WANTED.

If the relatives of John Adams, a cooper by trade, who removed from Bedford County to Mercer County, about twenty years ago, will call on the subscribers, they will hear of something to their advantage.

MONEY MONEY.—We urgently request all indebted to us in any manner, to send or bring us the amount they owe us, or at least, a part, next week.

PUBLIC MEETING.—The Knitting Association of Bedford will meet at the Court House, on Monday evening, Nov. 18th, 1861, for the purpose of making arrangements to secure the purchase and manufacture of more woollen goods for the Union volunteers.

GEN. JOHN C. FREMONT.

It will be seen by the news which we publish in to-day's paper, that Gen. John C. Fremont has been removed from the command of the army in the West.

NEW YORK ELECTION.

The returns of the recent election in this State, says the N. Y. Tribune, come in very slowly, but the quality is very good, and those already received indicate a majority of 80,000 or upward for the Union State ticket.

OUR FLEET.

The glorious news from our fleet will send a thrill of joy to the heart of every patriot in the land. The capture of the rebel forts at Port Royal and the taking of the town of Beaufort, S. C., is the most terrible blow the rebels have yet received.

LATER.—Since the above was in type we have received by telegraph, a confirmation of the news above referred to. A U. S. vessel has arrived at Annapolis, which reports that our fleet arrived at Port Royal, and after some unavoidable delay commenced the attack.

Going to the War.

We understand that Capt. D. W. Mullin intends leaving for Harrisburg, with his company next Tuesday. Our old friend, Isaiah Conley will be first Lieutenant. The company has been recruited in the Western part of our county, and we learn is composed of as fine a body of men as can be found anywhere.

Full returns of the late election in Maryland show about 30,000 Union majority on the State ticket, and the choice of 10 loyal and 1 Rebel Senator; and 66 Union to 6 Rebel Delegates.

A dispatch from Gen. Rosecrans, the only one since the reports about his fighting and surrounding Floyd, dated Friday last, was received at headquarters to-day. It says not a word of the Virginia thief, or of any engagement, or immediate prospect of an engagement with the rebels.

Lieut. Gen. Scott, sailed for Europe, on last Saturday in the steamship, Arago. A nation's prayers for his health go with him.

We call attention to the advertisement in relation to Horstak's Compound Chemical Soap.

EYE AND EAR.

Dr. Jones, of N. Y., the successful Oculist and Aurist, will practice at the WASHINGTON HOTEL, Bedford, Bedford County, from the 15th until the 25th of November. Dr. J. has had the advantage of a thorough medical education in Europe and America.

MUSTER ROLL

OF CAPTAIN RYCE'S COMPANY, NOW AT CAMP CAMERON.

- H. L. Ryce, Captain. W. P. Bardsollar, 1st Lieut. Edwin H. Hickok, 2 Lieut. C. R. Miller, 1st Sergeant. R. P. Pilkington, 2d "

AGNEW LEVI J.

- Blom John. Ballew Alex. Brown George. Beusman Charles. Cypher H. S. Cerna Geo. W. Cutler Jonathan. Corbett Wm. A. Charleston John. Conrad Thomas. Duffy James. Dool Paul. Eckles John T. Flegle S. S. Fetter Jos. J. Fetter Joseph. Fisher George. French Michael. Gephart John. Gilliam Dominic. Gabe Lawrence. Gross Solomon. Gahla William. Hutchison William. Hoffinger W. H. How Thomas. Hersberger Sam. Hatz William. Humbert David. Jones Samuel. Wemyer Daniel.

GLORIOUS VICTORY IN KENTUCKY.

PARIS Ky., Nov. 12. Gen Nelson met the rebels under Gen. Williams, at Pikeville, Pike county, Kentucky, on Friday last, and gained a glorious victory.

[SECOND DESPATCH.]

Col. Labe Moore attacked the rebels in the rear with 8,000 men. Col. Harris of the Ohio Second Regiment in front with 600 men. Col. Harris falling back, and Col. Moore pressing forward till the enemy were brought into the midst of Nelson's Brigade, when our forces pressed them upon all sides, killing four hundred and taking one thousand prisoners. The rest scattered in all directions. The Federal loss is small.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

LEXINGTON, Nov. 12.—A courier from Gen. Nelson's Brigade with despatches for Adj. Gen. Thomas, reports fighting at Pikeville for two days. The rebels lost 400 killed and 1,000 prisoners.

THE CAPTURE OF THE PIRATE SUMNER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A family letter received here, dated on the 25th of October, on board the United States frigate Santee, off Galveston, confirms the report of the capture of the Pirate Sumner. The writer says she was caught in her own trap.

It seems that she mistook one of the U. S. gunboats for a merchant vessel and started in pursuit. When the gunboat had drawn her out far enough she turned and chased her ashore.

Her officers and crew are prisoners on board the U. S. steam frigate Niagara.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 11.—An officer of the Twentieth Indiana Regiment, who came from Hatteras Inlet and just arrived in the Old Point boat, says he had a long conversation with a party who brought the news of the capture of Beaufort to Hatteras. He was not a deserter, but a private citizen, and a man of considerable intelligence, who had crossed the Sound at the risk of his life to bring this news to the Federal troops. The officer's report of the conversation corresponds precisely with what had already been sent.

Outside of this statement there is a report that in the taking of Beaufort, a large part of the town was burned.

GLORIOUS NEWS FROM THE FLEET.

FORTRESS MONROE, Nov. 10, via Baltimore.—The steamer S. K. Spaulding arrived from Port Royal.

"I go, gentlemen, across the ocean for a short period, and for a special purpose—for the chance of getting rid of this dimness, which perplexes me almost every moment—and in hope of finding some relief for the infirmities of my eyes."

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

INQUIRER—EXTRA.

TESTIMONIALS AND REFERENCES.

Read the Other Side First.

In the treatment of the EAR AND EYE, and the other organs of sense, it becomes necessary to have a good knowledge of everything pertaining to medicine and surgery. What are called regular Physicians may have graduated in either the old or the new school college, and can boast of a onesided education.

NAMES OF MEDICAL GENTLEMEN

- Through whose examination Dr. JOHANNES A. JONES has gone, and who have testified to his ability in the strongest language possible, by placing their names to his Diplomas, which are suspended in his Office, open to the inspection of the interested. VALENTINE MOTT, M.D., L.L.D. New York. Prof. JOHN J. CRANE, M.D. Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Jones is a thoroughly educated physician, a graduate of the old and new school medical colleges, and of an eye and ear college. No oculist and aurist, now practicing, has had the advantage which Professor Jones has had.

He discards the usual herbarian practice, and cures those difficult cases that the profession consider incurable. The advantages and skill of this institution cannot be had anywhere else.

We have seen cases of deafness and affections of the eye of various kinds that Dr. Jones has cured. We have seen an artificial eye introduced by him, which gives no pain, and cannot be distinguished from the natural organ. We have seen a number of persons in the vicinity who have been cured of eye-standing diseases by him.

Dr. Jones—I am under a thousand obligations to you. I could not see clearly out of my eye before you surgically cut it; now it is natural, and I can see perfectly. Mrs. M. RYCE, Bedford Co., Pa.

Dr. Jones cured me of rheumatism and deafness of twelve years' standing, after I had been pronounced incurable by the best doctors in the State. ARNOLD BALOWIS, Allegheny, Pa.

One of my eyes has been, from my youth, very much turned in and squinted. Dr. Jones has made it perfectly straight. MARY E. DONNELLY, Allegheny, Pa.

I have been so deaf that I could not hear long conversation without it was very close. I was troubled with a noise and continual ringing in my ears. Dr. Jones restored my hearing, and quieted the ringing in my head, in one hour. THOMAS W. TAYLOR, Bedford Co., Pa.

I was troubled with Catarrh of the eye, which has helped my eye and, I think, in due time will remove the whole trouble. S. N. YEE, Look Haven, Clarke Co., Pa.

I have been badly afflicted for 9 years with polyposis in the nose extending to the throat, so as to nearly suffocate me at times. One physician had cut the instrument to remove it. Dr. Jones did it skillfully in a few minutes. Mrs. R. EVANS, Ebensburg, Pa.

My eyes were entirely run out from the effects of a mite; the skillful Dr. Jones, of N. Y., on June 17, put an eye in for me without pain, which cannot be distinguished from the natural eye. W. M. BULL, Ashland, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

Both of my eyes were very much turned in since my birth (35 years). My sight was almost entirely lost, and my eyes were very much impaired and disfigured. Dr. Jones has operated on my eyes with perfect success, entirely removing the defect. Mrs. M. TONNER, Williamsport, Pa.

My little boy's eyes were badly turned and disfigured. I took him to Dr. Jones at the American House, Pottsville, June 25, who perfectly straightened them both without my son's feeling it, in three minutes.—LOUIS MILLER, Donaldson, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

I have been badly afflicted mentally and bodily with fits which came on twice a day. I have consulted with many physicians, but none of them could cure me and I have been using Dr. Jones' medicine only three weeks and am perfectly cured. I cheerfully recommend everybody to Dr. Jones. I feel like and am a new person.—Mrs. SALLIE RIEVES, Pottsville.

Dr. Jones straightened my eye which was crossed for many years, in two minutes, and benefited the sight very much.—JOS. DRUMHELLER, Landisville, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

One of my eyes has been turned inward for many years. Dr. Jones straightened it in two minutes.—Geo. MORT ANSLAND, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

Dr. Jones straightened my eye which had been turned in for a long time in a few minutes.—FIS. KITTLE, Port Carbon, Schuylkill Co., Pa.

I have been under Dr. Jones' treatment for a short time and am rapidly improving. The nervous affection is gone, the trouble in the joints and bones which our doctors could not help the least. Dr. Jones has quite cured.—JOS. D. JONES, Pottsville.

My daughter's eye was badly disfigured and impaired in sight. I took her to Dr. Jones on July 16th, who by an operation in a couple of minutes, entirely restored her eye in sight and appearance.—DAN L. McDONALD, H. Zloton, Luzerne Co., Pa.

My eye was badly turned and disfigured. Dr. Jones made it perfectly straight in two minutes.—Miss Jane E. Caldwell, Birmingham Hunt Co., Pa.

I have been afflicted with deafness & treated with all the means by Dr. Jones.—JAMES H. WEBB, Otter, Berks Co., Pa.

I have been afflicted with paralysis of long standing being treated with great success, improving and all under treatment of Dr. Jones.—MARY ANN E. MATTER, Colerain, Columbia Co., Pa.

A LETTER ON CATARACT, BY DR. JONES.

By the agency of mankind, Cataract is supposed to be seated on the surface of the ball or outside of the eye; but it is within, near the middle of the ball, and is an opacity of the crystalline lens or its capsule, or of both. The crystalline lens is the size of an ordinary bean, double-convex, held in the centre of the eye by ligaments. In its natural condition it is perfectly transparent, so that the rays of light which are admitted through the pupil must pass through it before they can reach the optic nerve and its fibres, which cause the eyeball from the posterior part of the eye; and when this crystalline lens loses its transparency, as it does in that condition of the eye called Cataract—then the rays of light cannot pass through it; hence, blindness of the eye must be the sequence.

Cataract may appear suddenly, but generally comes on gradually: the patient first begins to see things indistinctly, then objects assume a sooty appearance, then things look cloudy; finally the opacity of the lens becomes complete, and all the light is excluded from the sense of vision, and the patient is blind. This may come to pass in one eye or both. When one eye becomes blind from this cause, the other is apt to take on the same condition. Causes.—Many persons have a taint in the blood which produces Cataract (a peculiar diathesis); it is caused by mechanical injury of various kinds; it is caused by the injudicious and ignorant use of drugs applied to the eye; it is produced every day by old fogies, cataracts, and other similar persons who style themselves doctors; and even some good family physicians, without a knowledge of the anatomy of the eye, with more timidity than science, apply nitrate of silver, and many other remedies equally as injurious, which may not only produce Cataract, but generally leaves the cornea nebulous, causes the pupil to adhere, leaves specks on the eye, blunts the conjunctiva, produces thickening of the living membrane. We can cure Cataract, in some cases by absorption; other cases require an operation, which we perform in less than two minutes, and with no more pain than the pricking of a pin. Specks on the eye are the result of inflammation of the aqueous membrane, and the usual severe remedies applied to cure it. Our method of removing them is original, without pain or danger. Finally, with the superior advantages that we possess, the affections and diseases of the eye and ear are removed, and cured with a success hitherto unknown.

The friends of progression and science, and of the afflicted, as well as those well-meaning persons who may have allowed their own egotism, or their neighbors' scepticism, to deprive them of the means of health, sight, or hearing, will be the gainers by carefully perusing both sides of this circular and handing it to their neighbors; and if either or any of you need the services of Dr. Jones, you will find him to be what his friends claim for him,—a gentleman and a scientific man, with extraordinary advantages in his specialty. And his professional trip to distant cities will bring his skill within the reach of suffering thousands who could not obtain it if they had to go hundreds of miles from home.—REV. HENRY KING, N. Y.

PERMANENT ADDRESS.

P. S.—Please send this to an afflicted acquaintance.

JOHANNES A. JONES, M.D.

Jones' Eye and Ear Institution, at 218 West Fifteenth St., New York.

retiring without a murmur, though we trust there is no General in the service who would not have been equally prompt in obedience to such a duty.

But it is not only that he was at the head of such an army, so bound to him by that peculiar influence which he wielded over all who became his followers; but he was on the eve of a battle, long looked for. The enemy whom he had followed for hundreds of miles; the enemy by whose defeat the country for weeks had told him he might justify himself; the enemy who, with fire and sword, had made a State a desert, was at length before

GEN. SCOTT IN NEW YORK.

Gen. Scott, on Friday morning, was waited upon by the deputations from the Chamber of Commerce and Union Defence Committee, of New York, and, in answer to an address from the two bodies, delivered the following speech:

retiring without a murmur, though we trust there is no General in the service who would not have been equally prompt in obedience to such a duty. But it is not only that he was at the head of such an army, so bound to him by that peculiar influence which he wielded over all who became his followers; but he was on the eve of a battle, long looked for. The enemy whom he had followed for hundreds of miles; the enemy by whose defeat the country for weeks had told him he might justify himself; the enemy who, with fire and sword, had made a State a desert, was at length before

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of

him, and about to be delivered to his bow and spear. In the temper of that army at whose head he stood, not merely a General but a beloved chief, he could have fanned the spark of mutiny—who can doubt it—into the flame of him, and about to be delivered to his