

The Bedford Advertiser

A LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER, DEVOTED TO POLITICS, EDUCATION, LITERATURE AND MORALS.

B. F. McNEIL, Editor and Proprietor.

BEDFORD, PA. FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1864.

Vol. 37, No. 16.

The Bedford Inquirer

IS PUBLISHED
Every Friday Morning on Juliana Street, OPPOSITE THE MENDEL HOUSE, BEDFORD, BEDFORD COUNTY, PA.
TERMS:
$1.75 a year if paid strictly in advance, $2.00 if paid within six months, $2.50 if not paid in six months.
($2.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE WILL BE RE-CEIVED UNTIL AFTER THE TERM OF COURT)

Rates of Advertising

|  |        |
|--|--------|
| One Square, three weeks or less.....                                 | $1.25 |
| One Square, each additional insertion less thanthree months..... | 30     |
| One Square, 3 Months.....  | 3.00   |
| One Square, 6 Months.....  | 5.00   |
| One Square, 1 Year.....  | 8.00   |
| Two Squares.....   | 2.00   |
| Three Squares.....   | 3.00   |
| Four Squares.....  | 4.00   |
| One Column.....  | 20.00  |
| One Column.....  | 20.00  |
| One Column.....  | 20.00  |

Administrators and Executors' notices $2.50, Auditor's notices $1.50, if under 10 lines, Extra $1.25, if but one line, if over 10 lines, 25 cents on every additional line.
One square is the SPACE occupied by ten lines of minute type. For a square under five lines, extra. Advertising is charged to persons handing them in.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS CARDS.

E. H. AKERS,
ATTORNEY AT LAW, BEDFORD, PA.
Will attend promptly to all business entrusted to his care. Military claims speedily collected. Office on Juliana Street, two doors north of the Inquirer Office.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

ESPY M. ALSPY,
ATTORNEY AT LAW, BEDFORD, PA.
Will faithfully and promptly attend to all business entrusted to his care in Bedford and adjoining counties.
Military claims, Pensions, back pay, Bounty, &c. speedily collected.
Office with Mann & Spang, on Juliana street, 2 doors north of the Mengel House.
April 1, 1864—41.

J. H. DUBROW,
ATTORNEY AT LAW, BEDFORD, PA.
Office one door south of the "Mengel House."
Will attend promptly to all business entrusted to his care.
Collecting claims on the shortest notice.
Having also been regularly licensed to prosecute claims against the Government, particular attention will be given to the collection of Military claims of all kinds. Pensions, Back Pay, Bounty, Bounty Loans, &c.
Bedford, Apr. 8, 1864—41.

ALEX. KING,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
And agent for procuring arrears of Pay and Bounty money. Office on Juliana Street, Bedford, Pa.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

RIMMEL & LINGENFELTER,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW, BEDFORD, PA.
Have formed a partnership in the practice of the Law, on Juliana Street, two doors south of the Mengel House.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

JOHN MAJOR,
JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, HOPWELL, BEDFORD COUNTY.
Collections and all business pertaining to his office will be attended to promptly. Will also attend to the sale or returning of real estate. Instruments of writing carefully prepared. Also settling up partnerships and other accounts.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

JNO. HOWER,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
Bedford, Pa.,
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

JOSEPH W. TATE,
ATTORNEY AT LAW, BEDFORD PA.
Will promptly attend to collections and all business entrusted to his care in Bedford and adjoining counties. Money advanced on judgment. Notes and other claims. Tax and Accounts Collected, and Remittances promptly made. REAL ESTATE bought and sold.
G. W. JUMP, O. E. SHANNON, F. BERNDT.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

RUPP, SHANNON, & CO., BANKERS,
Bedford, Pa.
BANK OF DISCOUNT AND DEPOSIT.
COLLECTIONS made for the East, West, North and South, and the general business of Exchange, transactions, Notes and Accounts Collected, and Remittances promptly made. REAL ESTATE bought and sold.
G. W. JUMP, O. E. SHANNON, F. BERNDT.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

PHYSICIANS, &C.
I. N. BOWSER,
DENTIST.
Permanently located in Woodbury, will carefully and promptly attend to all operations entrusted to his care.
Dental Surgery done to an entire satisfaction. In the latest and most approved style, and at rates more reasonable than ever before offered in this section of country. Call and see specimens of work. All operations warranted.
Woodbury, April 1, 1864—41.

DR. B. F. HARRY,
Respectfully tenders his professional services to the citizens of Bedford and vicinity. Office and residence on Pitt Street, in the building formerly occupied by Dr. J. H.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

C. N. HICKOK,
DENTIST.
OFFICE IN BANK BUILDING,
BEDFORD, PA.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

J. L. MARBOURG, M. D.
Having permanently located respectfully tenders his services to the citizens of Bedford and vicinity. Office on Juliana Street, opposite the Bank, one door north of Hall & Palmer's office.
Apr. 1, 1864—41.

DANIEL BORDER,
FIFTY STILES, TWO DOORS WEST OF THE BEDFORD HOTEL,
Bedford, Pa.
Watchmaker & Dealer in Jewellery, Spectacles, &c.
WEEKS ON HAND A STOCK OF FINE GOLD AND SILVER WATCHES, SPECTACLES OF BRILLIANT DOUBLE REFINED GLASSES, also Scotch Pebble Glasses, Gold Watch Chains, Breast Pins, Finger Rings, best quality of Gold Pens.
He will supply to order any thing in his line not on hand.
Apr. 8, 1864—41.

HOTELS.
THE MENDEL HOUSE.
THREE DOORS NORTH OF THE PUBLIC SQUARE, JULIANA ST.
Bedford, Pa.
THIS HOUSE so well known to the travelling public, continues under the charge of Isaac Mengel. He has no pains to supply the wants and comfort of all who favor him with their patronage. His table is spread with the best the market affords. His chambers are elegantly furnished. A convenient stable is attached to the House, attended by careful hostlers.
Apr. 8, 1864—41.

Educational.

THE TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

"Knowledge is Power."

Propose, in a few articles, to consider what Education has accomplished for the world, and its relation to the progress of individuals and society.
Intellectual powers ennoble man, distinguish him from lower order of creation, and are his glory. The cultivation of these is his highest duty, and his greatest happiness. Talents are to be improved, not to be buried. The world secures knowledge is richly repaid in prosperity. The educated man has eyes to see the beautiful things of earth; ears to hear the harmonies of Nature; hands to gather up useless gems, which Heaven scatters along his path. Education translates us, as it were, in a world. Nay, more; it extends the curtains of habitations, and we, who once burrowed in darkness, may walk among the stars.

Who can estimate our indebtedness, as civil nations, to Education, and the general diffusion of knowledge? Machinery, set in motion regulated by a few, does the work of moving to one man the hands of the fabled Bos. Golden harvests gathered and garnered; spindles and looms converting wool and silk into fabrics of the finest texture and most beauty, with astonishing rapidity; any ore dug from the bowels of the earth, or moulded and polished, transferred to our door service or ornament, all these tell of the triumphs of science.

Timbering coach and sluggish bark, which carries fathers, is exchanged for the commodious, which flies through valleys, darts through tunnels and sweeps across the plain, conveys and merchandise from the seaport to the interior of the West, or the wilderness beyond, man days, the long journey, which it once required, to accomplish.

It was, when it was thought a wonderful feat, to send a messenger to carry intelligence of the rising and the setting of the sun. Now, the telegraph flash across a continent, in the twinkling of an eye, and the merchants in St. Louis, is apprised of the price of exchange in N. Y. before the sun has risen in the morning papers.— Theander-in-chief of a nation's forces, seated in a grand apartment, is informed of the contest, before the booming of cannon halway, and the smoke of battle disappeared, and the remotest hamlet in the land, rejoices in the restoration of peace, before the sun is dry on the parchment, which pledges and fealty.

The Press, books are indefinitely multiplied, and as cheaply furnished, that a laboring man may purchase what was beyond the reach of kings; and orators, who once spoke to thousands, now address a nation, in "that breathe and words that burn."
To wit, that the condition of man has been improved, his comforts increased, his means of enjoyment multiplied; the dim twilight of Civilization, glowing towards the meridian of a better and more glorious day. Let it receive due credit for what it has accomplished, whilst we prize, who gave these faculties of mind, by which has soared like a bird of dawn, into other regions of thought and action.

It is a fact, that progress is the law of nature. We have at first in the seed, a germ, which, burning through its covering, flame then the ear, and at the last, the fruit. The day by day, and year by year, youthful child passes on to maturity, then passes with the attributes of noble manhood, and the development of the mind, and knowledge is acquired by slow degrees. Isaac Newton began with the alphabet of the common school. Daniel Webster began with the alphabet of his intellectual greatness. Every man, who trains the youthful mind, and undertakes a noble task, he who clears away the rubbish of ignorance, and lays the corner-stone of an edifice. If his work is imperfectly done, it will reveal it. If the first principle is not clearly imparted, and impressed, the mind will never attain to higher, and freedom of thought.—A distinguished statesman acknowledges his indebtedness to the low-thatched schoolhouse, and cherishes his memory with an English boy, and affection than that of a learned man, who conducted him through the abstruse of metaphysical truth. A clergyman of noble natural gifts, who might have filled the highest position in the gift of the Church, an unimportant place, his indebtedness to the common school, and the reason of the defectiveness of his education. If the foundation is imperfect, the structure will be also.

General intelligence is necessary to the fulfillment of the gift of God. Unappreciated talents run to decay. The public speaker is an audience, which can perceive the truth, and be moved by his eloquence to noble deeds, and be benefited by his writings.
An orator who addressed the people, the reporters, draw inspiration from debates, which listened in breathless attention, in impassioned eloquence, or rent the air with applause. The intelligence, of the people went far to secure them the immortal which is theirs. Educated American is estimated, and longed for freedom and the yoke, and hence they caught the inspiration of the noble Henry, and shouted "Give us Liberty, or Give us Death." Common school then, receive the endorsement of the noblest of spirits, and support its important demands.
It raises up academies, colleges and universities, which shall be an honor to our land, and nobility a nation's pride and glory. It sends us back to the fountain, and removes the mill, and the broad ocean send up its waves, and the sun, thence to be borne back by the winds of Heaven, pouring baptism on the earth.

THE PERPETUITY OF THE UNION.

SPEECH

OF
HON. J. K. MOORHEAD,
OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Delivered in the House of Representatives, March 26, 1864.

The House being in the Committee of the Whole on the Report of the Committee on the Message of the President, read the following report:—
Mr. MOORHEAD said:

Mr. CHAIRMAN: My colleague from the 21st district [Mr. DAWSON] has made a noble and ablest speech on the other side of the House, and has stated with great frankness and clearness the grounds of his opposition to the war. Although it was well answered by my colleague from the 17th district, [Mr. SCOFFIELD] I feel it incumbent upon me to give it some attention, as orators adjoin, have like interests and feelings, and as special efforts have been made, by the creation of
his speech, to affect the political sentiment of Western Pennsylvania. We both live in the head of the great channel of trade formed by the Ohio
and Mississippi rivers, and their tributaries, down
which the coal, lumber, and agricultural products,
and the manufactures of glass, steel, iron, paper,
wood, &c., of our people, were accustomed before the rebellion to float safely and with no let or hindrance, to the inhabitants of thirty States,
and on through the Gulf to foreign markets.— Valuable as the Federal Union is to the people of this country, it is beyond all price to Pennsylvania, and especially to my constituents, and to me, who
like love their country, are proud of history, believe in free government, hate slavery, and regard it as a duty to their country, to be ready to die rather than see their national flag dis-
honored at home or abroad, and will permit
the destruction of their government by seceding slaveholders, who treat and speak of northern people—Democrats as well as Republicans—with more scorn, than they feel for the slaves on their plantations. The blow which traitors so made this war, fell first and heaviest on our institutions, when they closed the navigation of the Mississippi, seized and confiscated property and destroyed more than sixty years' worth of restoration of the right to which people have been vigorously fighting for many years.
I do this, Mr. Chairman, the more readily,
because the doctrine he announces are the very same which he sought on the war, and if not condemned by the people, would make southern rebels our masters forever.

My colleague began his speech by reading us
in glowing terms of the happy and prosperous state of the country "about eight years since,"
when he left these halls. He left two years before Mr. Buchanan became President. He was in the city when Mr. Buchanan handed a Government to Mr. Lincoln. Why is my colleague silent as to the pregnant fact, that Mr. Buchanan retired, the gloom of that awful period, such
that its remembrance causes an evil shadow over the heart of every patriot?

It has been suggested he has been a deep sleep during the eight years he was absent from political life. His speech furnishes good evidence of it. Let me then inform Lincoln he should know, and what many of his constituents do know, that not merely are we in "the midst of a revolution," but the country was in the midst of a revolution when Mr. Buchanan retired, and has been on the brink of revolution at different times, for thirty years.

Jeff Davis and his fellow-conspirators made signs of a revolution in 1850, under old Mr. Taylor.
In 1850, when California was admitted as a free State, but the hero of Buena Vista rebelled by announcing that he would hang the traitor who dared to lift a hand against the Union, and Jeff Davis knew well he would do it. They prepared for it, while Pierce lived in the White House, and Davis governed the country. They prepared for it, while Buchanan was President, and Floyd controlled the army, until, before the 4th
of November, 1860, the day Lincoln was elected, the 4th of March, 1861, the day he was inaugurated, every southern fort except Pickens a Sumter,
every army and arsenal, all the ordnance, arms,
and ammunition, all the custom-house, post-offices,
and mints, in a word all the property of the Federal Government in every seceding State were being seized by seceding traitors, with a blow
being struck, or a hot being fired in its defense;
and thirty days before the 4th of November,
eight slaveholding States had opened rebellion against the Government, cast off allegiance to it,
and excluded its authority, hoisted up its flag, captured its troops, arms, forts, shipments of war, assembled a congress at Montgomery, Alabama, adopted a constitution, elected a President, prepared to raise armies, and organized a confederacy as a foreign and hostile government, all under that Democratic rule, which colleague is so anxious to restore, and all done Democratic leaders! What did Mr. Buchanan do to prevent these great crimes? Nothing! What did the Democratic party do to prevent this? Nothing!
On the other hand, they resisted everything that looked like restoring the public property, and preserving the national honor.

Sir, so widespread was treason, without the President, that all hope was exhausted except the single one that his term would expire before all was lost. Thank God! Abraham Lincoln became President before the cause of the Union was totally ruined, and then the work of war began.
My colleague, in a speech of two or three pages,
says not a word in denunciation of these rebel acts and outrages, nor does he show any sympathy with those of his neighbors who bleed enriched every battle-field in case of their country, and whose bones are left Richmond
and Charleston, Gettysburg, Vicksburg and Chattanooga, and whose heroic valor has protected his home and mine from threatened Asia by his late political friends. Nor has he charges to make against anybody except of address and
folly against the people, and railing against the Government, the Quakers and Abolitionists.
The rebellion is tenderly mentioned as "the
rebellion"—no crime in it—no blood, the rebels' hands; only a mistake of judgment had guess as to time and result! Sir, I do not think my colleague has allowed his good feeling and expression in his speech; but as it was to aid in restoring the Democratic rule, its errors and fallacies should be pointed out.

My colleague says no prospect of end. He says "nearly three years of civil war have now discharged their relentless fury upon our unhappy country, and we are yet apparently remote from any satisfactory adjustment of our differences as when we first flew to arms." Sir, broadly deny this extraordinary statement. If the policy of the rebels, and those who sympathize with them,
to undervalue the results already accomplished,
and to discourage the results already accomplished, Jeff Davis says the South cannot be conquered,
and my colleague deliberately shuts eyes to the astonishing results already attained. The rebellion is in its last agonies; immemorial wrongs have been reclaimed, several States are renouncing their allegiance, and on every hand there is but one indication, and that of the increasing power of the Union, and the increasing weakness of the rebellion. My colleague says the rebellion is weaker now so blind as he who will not see. His doctrine is the true character of Government is a specimen brick of the genuine homestead.
He "finds no difficulty in a divi allegiance,"
and he "holds that allegiance to be the citizen in equal degree to the government of the State and to that of the nation, both proceeding from the same source—the people, and both subject to the same doctrine has deluded millions into treason, has undermined the Federal Government, brought on this war, and sacrificed the lives of thousands of our people. General Jackson in his day denounced it, and warned the country against it, and even Mr. Buchanan, in his last Annual Message, says it is inconsistent with the history of this well as the character of the Federal Government." It means that we have no national Government; that under the Constitution there is no Union, but only a knot of States that may be tied or untied at pleasure; that there is no such thing as a citizen of the United States, and no national flag to shelter him.

But, Mr. Chairman, the most cruel feature of my colleague's speech is that which, openly proclaiming his approval of Mr. Buchanan's course, implicitly censures that of the great old patriot
upon me to give it some attention, as orators
adjoin, have like interests and feelings, and as
special efforts have been made, by the creation of
his speech, to affect the political sentiment of Western Pennsylvania. We both live in the head of the great channel of trade formed by the Ohio
and Mississippi rivers, and their tributaries, down
which the coal, lumber, and agricultural products,
and the manufactures of glass, steel, iron, paper,
wood, &c., of our people, were accustomed before
the rebellion to float safely and with no let or
hindrance, to the inhabitants of thirty States,
and on through the Gulf to foreign markets.—
Valuable as the Federal Union is to the people of this country, it is beyond all price to Pennsylvania,
and especially to my constituents, and to me, who
like love their country, are proud of history,
believe in free government, hate slavery, and regard it as a duty to their country, to be ready to
die rather than see their national flag dis-
honored at home or abroad, and will permit
the destruction of their government by seceding
slaveholders, who treat and speak of northern
people—Democrats as well as Republicans—with
more scorn, than they feel for the slaves on their
plantations. The blow which traitors so made
this war, fell first and heaviest on our institutions,
when they closed the navigation of the Mississippi, seized and confiscated property and destroyed more than sixty years' worth of
restoration of the right to which people have
been vigorously fighting for many years.
I do this, Mr. Chairman, the more readily,
because the doctrine he announces are the very
same which he sought on the war, and if not
condemned by the people, would make southern
rebels our masters forever.

My colleague began his speech by reading us
in glowing terms of the happy and prosperous
state of the country "about eight years since,"
when he left these halls. He left two years before
Mr. Buchanan became President. He was in the city when Mr. Buchanan handed a Government to Mr. Lincoln. Why is my colleague silent
as to the pregnant fact, that Mr. Buchanan retired, the gloom of that awful period, such
that its remembrance causes an evil
shadow over the heart of every patriot?

It has been suggested he has been a deep
sleep during the eight years he was absent from
political life. His speech furnishes good evidence of it. Let me then inform Lincoln he
should know, and what many of his constituents
do know, that not merely are we in "the midst of a revolution," but the country was
in the midst of a revolution when Mr. Buchanan
retired, and has been on the brink of revolution
at different times, for thirty years.

Jeff Davis and his fellow-conspirators made signs
of a revolution in 1850, under old Mr. Taylor.
In 1850, when California was admitted as a free State, but the hero of Buena Vista rebelled by
announcing that he would hang the traitor who
dared to lift a hand against the Union, and Jeff Davis knew well he would do it. They prepared for it, while Pierce lived in the White House, and Davis governed the country. They
prepared for it, while Buchanan was President,
and Floyd controlled the army, until, before the 4th
of November, 1860, the day Lincoln was elected,
the 4th of March, 1861, the day he was inaugurated,
every southern fort except Pickens a Sumter,
every army and arsenal, all the ordnance, arms,
and ammunition, all the custom-house, post-offices,
and mints, in a word all the property of the Federal Government in every seceding State were
being seized by seceding traitors, with a blow
being struck, or a hot being fired in its defense;
and thirty days before the 4th of November,
eight slaveholding States had opened rebellion
against the Government, cast off allegiance to it,
and excluded its authority, hoisted up its flag,
captured its troops, arms, forts, shipments of
war, assembled a congress at Montgomery,
Alabama, adopted a constitution, elected a President, prepared to raise armies, and organized a
confederacy as a foreign and hostile government,
all under that Democratic rule, which colleague
is so anxious to restore, and all done Democratic
leaders! What did Mr. Buchanan do to prevent
these great crimes? Nothing! What did the Democratic party do to prevent this? Nothing!
On the other hand, they resisted everything that
looked like restoring the public property, and
preserving the national honor.

Sir, so widespread was treason, without the President, that all hope was exhausted except the
single one that his term would expire before all
was lost. Thank God! Abraham Lincoln became President before the cause of the Union was to-
tally ruined, and then the work of war began.
My colleague, in a speech of two or three pages,
says not a word in denunciation of these rebel
acts and outrages, nor does he show any sympathy with those of his neighbors who bleed
enriched every battle-field in case of their
country, and whose bones are left Richmond
and Charleston, Gettysburg, Vicksburg and Chat-
tanooga, and whose heroic valor has protected his
home and mine from threatened Asia by his
late political friends. Nor has he charges to
make against anybody except of address and
folly against the people, and railing against the Government, the Quakers and Abolitionists.
The rebellion is tenderly mentioned as "the
rebellion"—no crime in it—no blood, the rebels'
hands; only a mistake of judgment had guess as
to time and result! Sir, I do not think my colleague has allowed his good feeling and expression in his speech; but as it was to aid in re-
storing the Democratic rule, its errors and fallacies
should be pointed out.

My colleague says no prospect of end. He
says "nearly three years of civil war have now discharged their relentless fury upon our unhappy
country, and we are yet apparently remote from
any satisfactory adjustment of our differences as
when we first flew to arms." Sir, broadly deny
this extraordinary statement. If the policy of the
rebels, and those who sympathize with them,
to undervalue the results already accomplished,
and to discourage the results already accomplished, Jeff Davis says the South cannot be conquered,
and my colleague deliberately shuts eyes to the
astonishing results already attained. The rebellion
is in its last agonies; immemorial wrongs have
been reclaimed, several States are renouncing their
allegiance, and on every hand there is but one in-
dication, and that of the increasing power of the Union, and the increasing weakness of the rebellion. My colleague says the rebellion is weaker now so blind as he who will not see. His doctrine is the true character of Government
is a specimen brick of the genuine homestead.
He "finds no difficulty in a divi allegiance,"
and he "holds that allegiance to be the citizen in

in his fidelity, who quibbles about this technicality or that, who aids the rebels by denying the power of the Government to suppress the rebellion, and by denying its finances, should be arrested and despised as an Arnold who would sell his country.

But, said by these sympathizers with treason, that it is the duty of this Administration and its friends that this war exists, and that it is an unhappy and should be stopped, and that Mr. Buchanan's policy was one of peace and conciliation, and that Mr. Lincoln's has been one of usurpation and tyranny.

What answer to these allegations, full and ample as it is, may be important to the future history of our country, and our present duties are to suppress the rebellion, and to preserve the Union.
The great question of the day is, not by what process this condition of the day is, not by what back our rebel foes, how to save our people from spoliation and slaughter, our country from division, our Government from overthrow, and our people from the power of a despotic and unfinished hand? I have, Mr. Chairman, uniformly observed that the men who were in those ergies in discussing the past, are the least willing to meet the responsibilities of the present, and to the stature which it demands of all loyal citizens.

Still, sir, I am not willing to let so much of that part of the charge remain unanswered, as fixes upon the loyal North the responsibility for the war. The imputation is wholly false. The slaveholders were the aggressors. They were stimulated to the heinous crime by hatred of the progress of free institutions, by jealousies of their rising power, by envy of their great superiority in every art and pursuit of life, and of the higher civilization which paid, intelligent and free labor has conferred upon the free States of the Union. Does any one doubt this? If so, let him read the debates of Congress of the last ten years, but especially during the sessions of 1857-58 and 1859-60, and which abounded in the most malignant expressions of hatred, scorn, contempt, and disloyalty, plainly foreshadowing the base revolutionary schemes then fairly entered upon, and hurled defiantly at Northern Representatives the vile and unbecoming doctrine of the right of secession. One class of northern members, sympathized with their authors, and abetted their designs, believing that they saw in them the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of secession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But
for this, there would have been no secession. An-
other class boldly denounced the falsehoods, resen-
ted the insults, and hurled back the threats of se-
cession, declaring that under no circumstances
would they consent to a separation of these States.
But every member of the South, who believed
in the material of successful political influence. But for this, there would have