Bedford, July 1, 1864.

The arrivals at the Springs are not very nu merous yet. Among the visitors now or lately there are Gen. Buell, Mrs. Buell and Miss Mason; Mr. and Mrs. Bodisco, Russian Legation, Washington, D. C.; Hon. John A. Kasson, Washington; Mr. Appleton, the publisher, New York.

10. A draft will be made in Chambersburg on the 5th of July for the purpose of filling the deficiencies caused by exemptions for causes other than those caused by paying the commutation or furnishing substitutes.

A NEW POST OFFICE has been established at New Paris, in this County, and G. W. Blackburn appointed Post Master. A post office at this place has been needed for a long time, and we are very glad to re cord the establishment of one. We hear Mr. Blackburn spoken of as a good man for the place. There are a number of other localities in this County where new post offices are greatly needed. The New Paris post office opens under very favorable auspices we think. It starts with eleven new subscribers to the INQUIRER, all paid in advance. A good beginning, which rather naturally draws out our best wishes for New Paris.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS .-- Most of our readers, we be- ed by C. W. Ashcom, which were unanimously adoplieve, will be glad to know that our subscription list | ted : is still increasing very fast. Since our last issue we have added ninety-five names to our lists, besides eighty to commence on the 22d of July and continue until the 11th of November. They come from all parts of the County, always bringing encouraging words of approval of the Ixquinge. It is not easy to distinguish among so many, every where speak-ing a good word for the Ixquinge. But we may name the following gentlemen who have given in-disputable evidence of their purpose of doing what they can to extend the circulation and influence of they can to extend the circulation and influence of the INQUIRER. Wm. H. Davis and Geo. W. Blackburn, of Union township; A. B. Bunn, of Schells burg; J. B. Williams, of Bloody Run; G. R. Barndollar and J. B. Castner, of Woodberry, and Simon Nycum, of Rays Hill, have been active in their respective neighborhoods in procuring us new subscribers. We tender them our thanks, and venture the hope that they will not be likely to see the INQUIRER "smashed up," with such patronage and good will as it is receiving now-a-day.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC. Interesting Letter From Capt John S. Stukey WHITE OAK SWAMP. Near Cold Harbor, Va., June 8, 1864. * Lieut. Jack Porter of the 55th, too dinner with me yesterday, he just happened to call around about the time my cook had finished up cooking a nice ness of boiled beef and potatoes; he thought we knew how to live in campaign better than they did. They are just ike new troops, at this kind of roughing it out. After linner I went down with Porter to see the boys of the 55th, they lay about five hundred yards from here, or did the last few days. I expect they have left this morning, as they were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to mov at any time. I knew but few I saw in that regiment. saw Capts. Livingston and Metzgar, they were well but think this kind of service a little harder than South Carolina service. They told me they had no change of slothing for fifteen days. I told them (which is the case) that I had not changed my shirt, drawers and stocking since the first day of May They came to the conclusion not to say anything about their change of clothing. This s a trying time here, you can see wounded men being carried to the rear continually. Our regiment was re-lleved from the front line yesterday morning where we ad been for twenty-four hours. We lay in four lines of battle, and yesterday we lay in rear line but expect t move forward to relieve another regiment this morning. There is nearly as many men killed and wounded in rear ine of earthworks as in front. I had a man, Noah Allison, mortally wounded, day before yesterday, he died yesterday. He is the son of John Allison who lives in the ear of Dubbstown, back towards the mountains. We are now, they say, within five miles, air line, from Richmond. I think myself 'tis further. We have the ground all dug up with entrenchments, but the sharpshooters pick us off very fast. E. B. Stuckey was just this minute lying asleep, and a minnie bali struck within a foot of him and bounced over him. He says, "it may be a couple of days before one comes that close to him again." The boys are all in good spirits and think, "conquer we must." I look on many things here with wander and amazement. I see men have their most intimate friends shot down, and in a few minutes, after they are sent out of their sight they are laughing and joking again as usual. I yesterday made out a list of killed, wounded and missing in my Company up to date. Since this campaign ommenced twenty-three is the number. Three of which are dead, that I know of now, and I think some of the missing men are dead. Thos. Kurtz and Wilson Stuckey, are back somewhere with the trains.

Yesterday there was a flag of truce hoisted. came from the outskirts of the town, and were rein-forced by some drafted Copperheads and whiskey-rangers living in the village. After getting up steam they started for the Exhibition, where they proved their manliness and meanness by assailing a boy, who was soon relieved by his brother and several members of the Band, who thrust the swell-head rioters out of the room. After having procured another invoice of tangle-foot whiskey, or as it is called in that country, rain-water and potash, they armed themselves with clubs and stones, and attacked the members of the Band as they were leaving the the memory of the batter, however, armed them-selves with rundles from the bannisters, and after a little sharp playing on the empty pates of the Cop-perheads made them beat a hasiy retreat, and en-deavor to heal their wounded honor and heads by the free application, outward and inward, of the afore-alluded to whisky."

COPPERHEADS AND REBELS-The Difference .--Mr. Editor-A short time ago I was much amused and also somewhat enlightened in regard to the difference between a Copperhead and a Rebel. A stirling (?) "democrat" was asked if he could tell the difference. He, after bracing himself up, thought he could do it satisfactorily. "A Copperhead is a man, professing to be a democrat, talks much about the war, but won't go himself nor encourage others to go. This is what I call a Copperhead. A Rebel, you know, is a man that is opposed to Lincoln's administration." "Is that the difference," asked a bystander. "Yes." "Well, I differ somewhat with you. I think a Copperhead is a man who is a bogus democrat, having all the instincts of a traitor, but has not the courage to be a Rebel. A Copperhead is worse than a Rebel. A Rebel has courage, but a Copperhead is a poltroon. Every thing goes wrong with such a man, and, while he pretends to be a union man, he is only waiting for a good opportunity to sell out to Jeff Davis & Co." Whereupon our friend, finding himself nicely photographed, commenced, in the free use of redundant phrases known among swearers, to abuse and vilify all about him .--So much for Copperhead unionism.

EDITOR BEDFORD INQUIRER :--

I have no doubt but the friends of the members my Company are very anxious to know of our where abouts and how we are getting along since we have joined the grand army of the Potomac. Therefore I will pen you a few lines which you may insert in your valuable paper if you think it worth the room. We landed at Bell Plains, Va., on the 18th of May, where we remained until the 21st, and then we took up the line of march for the army of the Potomac, where we arrived after six days hard marching, and joined our Corps (the 2d, 2d Division and 2d Brigade,) on Sunday evening the 29th of May, and on Monday morning we were sent to the front line of battle, THE DRAFT.—Our town has been made very lively by the daily reporting of the drafted men of the va-by the daily reporting of the drafted men of the various townships for the last week.
