

Mr. Chase to the Kentuckians.

Ex-Secretary Chase delivered an eloquent speech at Covington, Kentucky, on Friday last, closing with the following appeal to the people of Kentucky:

"Now, what I want to impress upon you Kentuckians here to-night is this. Four years ago I pointed out a plan which I think all now admit would, if adopted, have led to peace. If it had not been for the insane determination of the slaveocracy to impose the re-institution of slavery not merely upon the states in which it existed, but upon all the territories of the Union, we would have had none of this rebellion and civil war. You in Kentucky would have been at peace. The people of every other slave state would have been at peace. The plan offered was rejected, and we are involved in war. Now, let me say to you that, being involved in war, there is no way out of it except by the complete suppression of the rebellion. No way but this one way, unless we are prepared to dismember the American Union; and we will fight longer before we will do that [Great applause.] There is no such thing, rely upon it, there is no such thing as persuading our people to give up their country. They will not consent to see the sacred, venerable form of our country hacked to pieces by rebel swords. [Applause.]

"So then you may count as certain that this country is to be preserved; and the only question is, will we be unanimous now? Will we profit by our past experience, and stand together now? Mr. Lincoln is sure to be elected. [Applause.] It is best for us to present the spectacle of a divided people? Will a vote against Mr. Lincoln do anything for the suppression of this rebellion? Every body knows it will not. Every body knows it; every rebel sympathizer, every rebel deserter, every man who wants the cause of the country to fail, the stock-jobbers of New York, who speculate upon the necessities of the people, in the rise of gold, every disloyal man every shade of disloyalty knows it. Hence they are all against Mr. Lincoln. Now, then, is it worth while to increase their number? Is it not a great deal better, inasmuch as Mr. Lincoln is sure to be elected, is it not a great deal better, as a matter of mere common sense and calculation, to stand by him, and make the rebels feel that this is a united people, and that they are determined that Mr. Lincoln shall finish the war which they began, by suppressing this rebellion. [Applause.]

"Ask the men in the field; ask Grant. He tells you if the people will only be united in this war, he shall find no trouble in the front. Ask Sherman, and he tells you the same thing. Ask nearly every officer in the army, and they will tell you 'what was a united people as the ballot-box. We will take care of the rebels if you will take care of the sympathizers.' Make your ballots tell and your bullets will not fail.

"Now then, if the men who conduct the war are thus unanimous, if it is a plain common sense statement, that the Union is strong, safety and speedy peace, why should not Kentucky stand by the Union, and not merely by the Union, but by the only man through whom alone, under existing circumstances, this Union can be preserved. [Applause.] I speak as to wise men judge you what I say. Consider these things among yourselves. Determine for yourselves whether or not it is not better in every point of view for Kentucky and for Kentuckians to stand together with their brethren of Ohio, of Indiana, of Pennsylvania, and of all the other states which speak for union and freedom, to be established and secured through the election of Mr. Lincoln—a great deal better than to go off into an opposition where all they do can avail them nothing, just nothing." [Applause.]

A Short Sermon for General McClellan's Meditation.

"How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him."

"These words, General, were those of an honest patriot of strong convictions, to an unstable, wavering, perverse people, led astray by bad leaders. Their application to individuals generally is too patent for any person to miss it. Their application to yourself in particular is most remarkable. The position you now hold, General, may be politic. But is it soldierly? Is it manly? Is it honest? If you are for crushing out this rebellion by the strong arm of the nation, come out and say so. If you are for 'an armistice' and an immediate cessation of hostilities," come out and say so.

"You more intimate friends say you are all right. They tell this around in coteries, and show your letters in them, and say that you repudiate the Chicago platform; that you denounced Fernando Wood as a person that you cannot make your associate, and would not even take by the hand; that you have never so much as spoken to Valandigham, and that you will not put yourself in leading strings to them.

"These are brave words, General. But why proclaim them only in the coteries of your rich and fashionable friends. They are not the people. They are not even all of the upper-tendium. How many among the millions, whose votes are to decide the fate of this nation on the 8th of November, have any settled faith as to which way you are inclined, however decided they may be as to how they will vote.

"General, this may be politic; but it is neither soldierly nor manly. When that sterling patriot, Andrew Jackson, proclaimed 'The Union must and shall be preserved,' was any one in doubt which he was upon? When that equally sterling patriot, John A. Dix, proclaimed 'Shoot down the first man that dares to lower the American flag,' did any one doubt what he meant? No, General. Had these words been proclaimed with all the awful phenomena that begeth Sinai, in that sublime scene of the promulgation of the Law, they could not have been made more impressive. They shook the great American heart, throbbing with patriotism, and found a response in every vibrating chord of it. There was no halting between two opinions; neither in the men who proclaimed them, nor in the men who heard them. But how is it with you? Who can answer this question better than yourself?"

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS. A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alternative—wonderful efficacy in disease of the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

Cure Dyspepsia, Liver complaint, Headache, General Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of other Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forewarned against disease, and so far as human system can be protected by human means against maldies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, Hostetter's Bitters may be relied on as a safeguard.
