Poetry.

AN APPEAL.

It would not cost you much, dear,
To linger in the shade,
While our gay companions wander
Up and down the woodland glades;
Let the red fern drop around us,
And the dead leaves flutter down,
Our hearts are fresh and green, dear,
Though the forest's search'd and brown.

It would not cost you much, dear,
To let me see your hand, Ungloved—though well I know it
For the fairest in the land;
And those dainty little fingers
For an instant might I hold;
It would not cost you much, dear,
To me, "were gain untold!"

It would not cost you much, dear,
To hear me whisper low,
A secret I discovered
Not quite a week ago.

Would you promise, having told you,
That I never need repeat it, Ah! you guess it! No reply?
But your silence gives consent!

COMING HOME.

O brothers and sisters, growing old,
Do you all remember yet
That home in the shade of the rustling tree, Where once our household met?

Do you know how we used to come from school,
Through the summer's pleasant heat;
With the yellow fennel's golden dust
On our tired little feet?

And sometimes in an idle mood
We lingered by the way;
And stopped in the woods to gather flowers,
And in the fields to play!

Till warned by the deepening shadows, fall
That told of the coming night,
We climbed to the top of the last long hill,
And saw our home in sight?

And, brothers and sisters, older now Than she whose life is o'er,
Do you think of the mother's loving face,
That looked from the open door?

Also, for the changing times of time:
That home in the shade is low;
And that loving smile was hid from us,
In the darkness, long ago!

And we have come to life's last hill,
From which our weary eyes
Can almost look on that home that shines
So brightly in the skies.

So, brothers and sisters, as we go,
Still let us move as one,
Always together keeping step,
Till the march of life is done!

For that mother, who waited for us here,
Wearing a smile so sweet,
Now waits on the hills of paradise
For her children's coming feet!

THE WORK BEFORE US.

The Unionists have had their time of rejoicing for the great political victory achieved on Tuesday last; and, with few inconsiderable exceptions, they have rejoiced temperately, expressing an exuberant gratitude for the principle established, without exulting insolently over the party or the person defeated. Even the old and offensive partisan nickname has suddenly lost its vogue; and the general disposition is to forget the animosities of the past in the present and strike a truce for the present. On the other hand, the democrats, who fought their battle strenuously, though somewhat wildly, have, with the same inconsiderable exceptions, submitted gracefully to their defeat; showing that the old instincts of genuine American citizenship are still alive in them, and that they are not so much the creatures of a party as people. They have made their appeal to the highest tribunal, to the final arbiter of political controversy; the decision has gone against them on the main question of the prosecution of the war, and they obey the mandates of the court.

In these circumstances, with a temporary lull in the excitement, it becomes us to inquire what is the first duty of really patriotic men. It is unmistakably to carry on the war with renewed vigor in order bring about a more certain and speedy peace. A distinguished democrat, long a resident of the South, and a warm admirer of McClellan, said to us the other day: "We must not allow ourselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by the fact that we have won a great victory. We must not allow ourselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by the fact that we have won a great victory. We must not allow ourselves to be lulled into a false sense of security by the fact
