It contains the aliment SPLENDID LIST OF ARTICLES of plants in a state of ready solution, and ALL TO BE SOLD FOR ONE DOLLAR EACH when applied acts not only with immediate 100 Gold Hunting Cases Watches cach $100.00 and obvious effect, but with a sustained energy, which pertains to few even of the most concentrate manures. When it is not convenient to apply it in irrigation—the most economical method perhaps, of using it—it should be absorbed by some material which may be used as an ingredient in the convenient and obvious effect, but with a sustained enpost heap. Soda muck, and other similar articles, should be desposited where the suds from the sink and laundry may find its way to them, and be absorbed, for the benefit of crops. In this way several loads of manure, suitable for the support and sustenance of any crop, may be made at comparatively small expense. The highly prutrescent character of this fermentable liquid qualify it admirably for the irrigation of compost heaps of whatever material composed. Being a potent fertilizer, it must, of necessity, impart additional richness to almost any material to which it may be added. Try it, and mark the results.

Willard Griffin, West Granby, Ct., gives the following information to the New York Farmers' Club, on leached ashes for manure. "Some one of our correspondents several months since inquired if there was saltpetre in leached ashes. There is not. Saltpetre is nitrate of potish. Nitric acid is obtained from a substance that wood does not furnish If leached ashes are deposited near the house, where soapsuds, urine, and other slops containing animal matter are thrown upon them, they will contain saltpetre, and from such it may have been extracted. Wood ashes contains potash, soda, magnesia and lime, besides sulphur, phosphorus, carbon and common salt; about one-half of ashes is lime. Leaching extracts the potash and soda mostly and but little of other matters but as potash and soda are only a small proportion of ashes, they are nearly as good for manure after leaching as before. I have seen plumb trees growing near a house where leached ashes were thrown around them every year, that retained a vigorous condition and were loaded with fruit for several years, while other trees in the neighborhood were subject to the ravages of the curculid and black knot."

CULTIVATION OF DAHLIAS,

For both tubers and potted plants, I dig holes, and put into each about a quart of muck, enough to thoroughly line them. Inside of this I put a portion of clean sand, with which I entirely encircle the root or tuber. The sand will preserve the roots from rotting, also from insects. The muck will keep them moist. The little rootlets or feelers will repetrate through all this and ill penetrate through all this and draw what nutrition the plant requires for blooming, and at the same time be prevent-ed from too rank a growth of stalk and ed from toe rank a growth of stalk and leaves. New roots grown in this way will keep much better through the Winter, and flower better the ensuing season. I have tried various other methods with partial or imperfect success. In this I am always sure of the most satisfactory results.—Mrs.

For Blackwood and the four Reviews. 15,00 and These works will be printed on a greatly improved quality of paper, and while nearly all American Periodicals are either advanced in price or reduced in size—and very generally both, we shall coatinue to give faithful copies of all the matter contained in the original editions, Hence, our present prices will be found as cheap, for the amount of matter furnished, as those of any of the competing periodicals in the country.

Compared with the cost of the original editions, which at the present premium on gold would be about, $100 a year, our prices ($15) areexceedingly low. Add to this the fact that we make our annual payments to the British Publishers for early sheets and copyright in Gold—$loosting us at this time nearly $2.50 in currency—and we trust that in the scale we have adopted we shall be entirely justified by our subscribers and the reading public.
