UNION COUNTY MEETING. THE FIRST RALLY OF THE CAMPAIGN.

THE BALL TO BE PUT IN MOTION. The Union men of Bedford county, will as semble in Mass Meeting, at the Court House in Bedford, on TUESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 5, 1865 to take measures to inaugurate the campaign.

Every man who stood by the Government in its trials, and who desired the overthrow of the rebellion, is cordially invited to attend.

The principles and nominations of the Union State Convention will be submitted for your endorsement, and active measures taken to secure the success of the Union ticket in the State, and particularly in this county. Loval men. Soldiers, and citizens, come as one man, and let us determine to overthrow the tyranny and iniquity of Copperheadism in this county, and erect in its stead the peace ful reign of "Law and Order." . John Cessua, Hon. Wm. H. Koontz

Col. John H. Filler, and others, will address J. R. DURBORROW,

M. A. Points, Sec. Ch'm. Co. Com. AUGUST 18, 1865. Union County Committee.

The members of the Union County Con mittee will meet at the Washington Hotel, in Bedford, on Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1865, at three o'clock in the afternoon. A fall turn out is earnestly requested. It is believed that by united action and proper zeal, we shall, this fall, be able to rescue the county from the clutches of Copperheadism, and thus identify her with our own beloved commonwealth who, with her sister states, has long since placed herself on the side of freedom. The following compose the committee:

Bedford Borough, J. R. Durborrow, Chair

man, M. A. Points, Secretary. Bedford tp., Thos. Hughes. Bloody Run bor., John A. Gump. Broad Top, O. P. Dom. Colerain, C. F. Hetzel. Cumberland Valley, F. A. Growden. THE CROUSE MURDER .- Below we give on the tragedy which occurred in this place on the 1st of August. There appears to be some difference of opinion in regard to John P. Reed, Jr. One party asserting that he put in a substitute while the other contends that he paid commutation. We have the authority of Capt. Eyster for saying that he paid

MURDER OF AN Ex-PROVOST MARSHAL BY CANADIAN REFUGEE. -It is with feelings of pain that we recrod the murder of Mr. Jacob Crouse of Bedford, Ex-Deputy Provost Marshal, in the streets of that town, on Tuesday the 1st inst., by John P. Peed, Jr., son John P. Reed, a lawyer of that town. With all the parties we are acquainted. Not long before the first draft, but when it was known there would be one, John P. Reed, Jr., left for Canada, where he studied law. Whilst there he was drafted twice. He did not report until about the closing of the war, when he came back, and his father managed to get be came back, and his father managed to get a substitute in for him. This of course was done so as to save him from the law distranchising skulkers. It is contended by the Reeds and their copperhead friends, that he did not leave on account of the war. This is all fudge. It is not likely that the father, a man of moderate means, would keep his son in a foreign country at an expense of $1800 a year, for three or four years, where had no relatives or friends, when he himself is a lawyer and has a law office in Bedford. His sons' expenses at home would hardly have been one-fourth that amount. Mengel Reed, a brother of J. P. Reed, in company with Brinton Lyon, son of Wm. Lyon, Eag., of Fedford, in 1863, went to McConnelsburg, and joined Imboden's cavalry. He was taken prisoner at Fort Delaware. His triends learning this fact, went on and got him to take the oath of allegiance, and thus got him out of the rebel service. Lyon, his companion, more brave in a bad cause, fought it out till the end, and had not, we believe, the brazen impudence to return among-loyal men where he was known. Mengel's friends pretend he was pressed into the rebel service! He and Lyon maturally joined the army of their choice, according to the teachings of their friends.

On Saturday week, as Crouse was coming down street he passed Mengel Reed in front a substitute in for him. This of course was joined the army of their choice, according to the teachings of their friends.

On Saturday week, as Crouse was coming down street he passed Mengel Reed in front of the Mengel house. Crouse remarked, 'how are you, Johnny,' and passed on. Mengel hallooed after him to stop and he would cane him. Crouse stopped, and told him he need go no further than just there. At this John P. Reed, Jr., run in and struck Crouse, and in the scutile they both fell. Reed's friends rushed in and kicked and struck Crouse. They rushed in and kicked and struck Crouse. They were then parted. In the evening Crouse mistook Schell Reed, for his brother, John P., and struck him. John P. was on hand, when another scuffle ensued, and ended in neither parts being and the party being much hurt.
Here follows the Inquirer's account of the child of her bosom. He was hated by the copperheads of Bedford county, on this account, and because he discharged his duties without fear, favor or affection, he has died a martyr to his country. We knew him well, and we speak knowingly of his many good qualities. Peace to thy manes, old friend?

The Bedford Homicide.—Mr. John P. Reed, Sr., is an intelligent and respected citizen of Bedford. He is, we believe, a member of the bar and has filled important official trusts. He has two sons—John P., Jr., and Mengel by name—and it may be others, but these have earned for themselves a place in the records of justice. Not knowing to the contrary, we assume that Mr. Reed taught his sons, among other essential virtues, that all their manifold social, religious and political rights are the fruits of our most beneficent system of government, and that they owe unfaltering devotion to its cause whenever its permanency or priceless principles of freedom are assailed by either foreign or domestic foes. But however faithfully he may have discharged this sacred parental duty, his sons proved faithless to his precepts, to themselves and to their own great inheritance. So far from following the dictates of patriotism when treason made causeless, wicked war to overthrow the THE BEDFORD HOMICIDE, -Mr. John P lowing the dictates of patriotism when treason made causeless, wicked war to overthrow the government, and responding to the Nation's call in the hour of its deepest peril, Mengel embraced the first favorable opportunity to enlist in the traitors' ranks in 1863, aiming to add to the full measure of his country's woes, and thus served in perfidious, murderous war apon his own home and people. To this crime he was faithful until he was captured as a prisoner or war and he was held as such until the bloody work of treason ended in discomfiture, when he proposed formally to resume his fidelity to the government by taking the oath of allegiance. The institutions in its boundless bloody work of treason ended in discomfiture, when he proposed formally to resume his fidelity to the government by taking the oath of allegiance. The institutions in its boundless magnanimity permitted him to do so, and he returned to Bedford to enjoy the blessings of the government he had vainly sought to destroy, and to mingle with the people again whose sad bereavements he had aided to his utmost power, to shadow with fresh sorrows. A genefous people at his home bore with his malignant perfidy to the free North that gave him birth, and the shameless insolence that made him seek the comforts of a home where he had once sought to mark the desolating track of treason's barbarous war. His brother, John P., inspired with hate for the free government under which he had been reared, fled to a foreign land avowedly to escape service in behalf of his imperiled country and the jurisdiction of its laws. When the National enrolment law passed Congress, or was about to pass, he journeyed to Canada, where he supposed that he could unreservedly fraternize with congenial rebels plotting treason and death to his brethren. He entered an ternize with congenial rebels plotting treason and death to his brethren. He entered ar office for the study of law, and meant, as the sequel proves, to remain only until he could return home without danger of being required to aid in preserving the government under which he hoped to live and to which he nominally confessed allegiance. But, although in a distant land, he had forgotten that he had no shiding place in the event the large for t no abiding place, in the eye of the law of either Canada or the United States, other than in Bedford, and he was properly enrolled and drafted a conscript in the Union army. O dratted a conscript in the Union army. Of course he did not respond, as he had gone away for the purpose of escaping service in the cause of his country, and he quietly and snugly enjoyed British hospitality until our Congress disfranchised all deserters unless they gress disfranchised all deserters unless they should report within a given period. However much Mr. John P. Reed, Jr. was willing to be called a Canadian when a draft was to be made, he was quite unwilling to be a Canadian in the sense that would prevent him from voting the Democratic ticket whenever an operating should offer, and he had his friends portunity should offer, and he had his frie portunity should offer, and he had his friends at once proceed to appeal to the Provost Marshal to allow him to put in a substitute, Captain Eyster refused; Gen. Hinks finally assented to it, and before he had furnished his substitute the war was manifestly about to close, and he was allowed to pay commutation. Being thus clear of the draft and the rebellion being so out at all fours that future drafts were antigener inspectation, he, too, resumes his residence in Bedford.

his residence in Bedford.

It may be, as alleged, that both these young men behaved on all occasions with becoming reserve and propriety; but while perhaps ninety-nine hundredths of the citizens were ninety-nine hundredths of the citizens were disposed simply to treat their perfidy to the government with forbearance or silent contempt, there were a few whose order for the cause made them call things by their right names, even at the cause of disturbing the public peace. Among these was Mr. Jacob Crouse, who had acted as an Assistant Provost Marshal in that county, and had doubtless learned in the discharge of his official duties, how mean a traitorous sympathizer may be. It is said that he would at times address Mr. Mengel Reed, the ex-rebel hero, as "Johnny and thus salute him on the street in presence of his companions. Had Mr. Reed retorted on Mr. Crouse by calling him a "yank," it would have been equally just, but perhaps materially less offensive; and because Mr. Crouse would at times remind him of his companionship he had deliberately chosen and publicly persisted in for more than a year, he deemed it cause for offence. To be reminded of the truth, and of what he would doubtless past in congenial circles, he felt to be a hu iliation in Bedford, and altercation succeed daltercation between Crouse and the brothers Reed until finally the parties met or the street on Tuesday of last week, and Mr. Jno. P. Reed, Jr., shot Mr. Crouse dead.

We have not, at the time of this writing, any details of the fatal affray. It may be, as alleged by the Bedford Gazette, that the immediate provocation was all on the side of Crouse; that he was a quarrelsome bully and persistently provoked Mr. Reed without retaliation until words ended in blows and blows in the deadly bullet. Or it may be, as we have heard, that the conduct of the young Reeds was such as justified any loyal man in publicly resenting their traitorous sentiments and actions; that the shooting was deliberate y determined upon under the advice of sym-pathizing friends, and that Mr. Reed prac-iced with his pistol assiduously before the fa tal meeting so as to make sure of his victim. Of these allegations we have no opinion to express. All that we know is that they met; that the skulking conscript was armed while the loyal citizen was not, and the result was the death of the latter on the public street without a moment's warning. The Read without a moment's warning. The Reed brothers are in custody and we leave them to the verdict of the jury of their country who shall be called to determine the mersure of burg Repository. MURDER AT BEDFORD .- An enrolling MURDER AT BEDFORD.—An enrolling officer, named Crouse, was murdered at Bedford, on Tuesday morning last, the 1st inst., by a deserter named Reed, who had but recently returned from Canada. Some difficulty occurred, a few days ago, between the parties, and on the morning mentioned they met on the streets, when Reed drew a revolver, and when Crouse attempted to pick up a stone to defend himself, Reed fired—the ball taking effect in the side of Crouse, passing through the heart, and killing him almost instantly. Reed was a notorious Copperhead, and in this murder simply obeyed the teachings of Bedford Copperheadism.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

Shot by A CANDA REFIGEE:—We learn by leputy Provost Marshal for Bedford county. has shot dead in the street on Tuesday y John P. Reed, a returned Canada refi Ve know all the parties in this affair by John P. Reed, a returned Canada refugee. We know all the parties in this affair well. John P. Reed, the father of the murderer, is a leading "democrat" in Bedford, and as the result of his peculiar "democratic" teaching during the war, one of his sons joined the rebels while they held possession of the town in which we resided, and the other fled to Canada to escape the draft. Since the close of the war the cowardly skedaddler returns, and shoots one of the most respectable citizens of Bedford, on the street, because he had officiated as a United States officer. We hope he will be hung, but we doubt whether hope he will be hung, but we doubt whether he can be brought to justice in Bedford coun-ty.—Pekin Republican, Illinois.

An affray occurred on Tuesday in Bedford, Pennsylvania, a place noted for its Secession proclivities during the war, in which Mr. Jacob Crouse, late Deputy. Provost Marshal of Bedford county, was shot dead in the street by John P. Reed, a returned refugee from Canada. His brother, Mengel Reed, who has been in the Bedelar war. who has been in the Rebel army, was uls gagaged in the affray.—Gettysburg Star.

MURDER AT BEDFORD. Jacob Crouse MURDER AT BEDFORD.—Jacob Crouse, a Deputy Provost Marshal, and a quiet and peaceable citizen, was shot dead in one of the public streets at Bedford, on Tuesday last, by John P. Reed. It seems that Reed fled to Canada to avoid the draft, and having just returned, it is probable Crouse attempted to arrest him, when the unfortunate occurrence took place. Reed's brother Mengel, who had served in the rebel army, was present and engaged in the affray. Both the brothers have been lodged in jail. Political feeling runs high in Bedford, the Reeds being Democrats, and Crouse a Republican. This may have had something to do with the murder.—Del. had something to do with the murder.

Co. Rep.

The Bedford Gazette is only consistent when it justifies the murder of Jacob Crouse, who was recently shot down by a returned deserter, for no other reason than that the delinquent and cowardly copperhead hated Crouse as a faithful officer. The Gazette justified the murder of Union men by the rebels, the starvation of Union prisoners, and lastly the assassination of Mr. Lincoln. We repeat then that to approve the murder of Crouse is only to be consistent.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

You remember I concluded my previous let Lincoln met with opposition from the condoling friends of James Buchanan, whose doughfaced ministrations at the latter end of his land to condemn him, and perhaps to attrib ute to him, as a reason for his course, a com mitment to the interest of the Southern people

It is natural for persons to excuse their friends for mere mistakes, especially those, that never before betrayed confidence, and almost as natural to attribute right views to one, whose judgment was never positively known to err, as it is to believe that a wise war. But, sir, I did not take up my pen to man can distinguish positive right from posi

And the belief by many, in the honesty of purpose, with which he advocated reconcilia ion, yet withal, so contrary to that of Gen Jackson's plan on a similar occasion, preserv ed to him the fascinations of his constituency Any other policy that James Buchanan migh have given more unmistakeable evidence of the government of which he was yet the head, instead of the timorous heart that inherited his frail being, and with that will, had deter mined that the Union "must and shall be pre served" by every power vested in the President to throw against this treason, scarcely an individual that afterwards composed the peace party in the North, if treason had lasted so long, as to behold the inauguraof President Lincoln, would have failed to sustain him with the laudations that pure democracy were wont to bestow upon Andrew Jackson. I ask is it not so? If you say yes, will you not agree with me further? say yes, will you not agree with me further? In the course pursued by James Buchanan, in reference to this rebellion, and that pursued by Andrew Jackson with regard to South Carolina nullification, there were two distinct policies. I will not deny merit to either, but if a pacific course could with prepriety have been adopted in either of those instances of executive interposition, would it not have In the course pursued by James Buchanan, ir utive interposition, would it not have been vastly more appropriate to have applied the pacific measures, when only one State was renouncing allegiance, than when a dozen were setting up a new national independance? were setting up a new national independance? In the first instance, the life of the nation could not well have been endangered, while in the second, a day's delay was often the power of half a state against us. When two intelligencies are at variance, each having a zeal not readily surmountable, it is natural for one to amuse the other with objects of diversion, until it has the better qualified itself for composed," about as much as would the Discovery of the first instance of the nation at case, for or against any one who is unfortunate enough to be a prisoner for homicide, through the columns of any newspaper. But, if I did, I should hardly consult the individual who "intimated" that I wrote the article in question. It was not designed to spring from any terms that might be agreed upon by a few, but the rebellion was designed to fall with the exercise of executive power and now, not until the soil of the nation be drenched with the blood of half a million of brothers. The new administration came into power when only seven States had passed the ordinance of secession, and with an inaugural declaration vouchsafing protection to all Southern rights, still the current of the rebellion was not stayed; but unheeding these assurances, four other states plunged into the gulf of secession, one declared an independence and another determined to remain neu tral; while still two or three other states acknowledged the right of the South in the rebellion. It had been hoped that this definition of the policy of the government, might prevent the tide of rebellion from further aggression upon the old union, and possibly
