Union County Committee. The members of the Union County Com ittee will meet at the Washington Hotel, in Bedford, on Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1865, at three clock in the afternoon. A full turn out is earnestly requested. It is believed that by nited action and proper zeal, we shall, this fall, be able to rescue the county from the clutches of Copperheadism, and thus identify her with our own beloved commonwealth, who, with her sister states, has long since placed herself on the side of freedom.

The following compose the committee: Bedford Borough, J. R. Durborrow, Chairnan, M. A. Points, Secretary. Bedford tp., Thos. Hughes. Bloody Run bor., John A. Gump. Broad Top, O. P. Dom. Colerain, C. F. Hetzel. Cumberland Valley, F. A. Growden. Harrison, James Mullin. Hopewell, John P. Smith Juniata, Jos. Dull. Liberty, E. A. Fockler. Londonderry, Jacob Evans. Monroe, Jas. R. O'Neal. Captured! Who told you so? Mengel Reed and young Lyon came here about the our citizens, to be trout fishing, but as soon do not deviate from our published terms. We ed an interview with him. At that interview have only the Advertised price for EDITORIAL they told him, in the presence of several of "Confederate service." Gen. Stuart endeavored to dissuade them from entering the service. He told them that with their opinions prices if we do not be governed by them, and and views, as expressed to him, they could do more good to the cause for which he fought, at home, than they could in the army; particularly as he thought from their respective appearances, they could not endure the hardships and exposure of a soldier's life. They insisted on joining him: telling him that their arrangements were perfected for so doing, and intimating that for certain reasons they could not in safety return home again anyhow. At last the General accepted them.

When the young men came here they stopped with Rev. Mr. Kepler, a gentleman not unknown to the citizens of Bedford. So oper were they in their affiliation with the rebel officers and soldiers, and so openly did they avow their intention of joining the rebel arits trials, and who desired the overthrow of e rebellion, is cordially invited to attend.

The principles and nominations of the vious to the departure of the rebels, Mr. D Union State Convention will be submitted for Fore, one of the most prominent Democrats of our town and county, called Rev. Mr Kepler aside and told him that the young men staying with him had come here for the avow ed purpose of joining the rebel army. Mr. Kepler called Reed and Lyon and took them up to his house. In a few moments they came down to the corner opposite the Cross Keys Hotel and laid their carpet sacks, which they carried with them, down, then crossed over to Stuart's headquarters. Mr. Kepler came down shortly after, and stated, in substance, that he had accused them of coming here to join the rebels, and that they had not denied it; and that thereupon he had requested them to remove their effects from his premises, as he did not wish to be accused by the citizens of countenancing them in their disloyalty. The next morning, Reed and Lyon, carpet bags in hand, accompanied the departing rebels on their way southward-not because they were prisoners of war, but through choice. All the above statements can be verified by the affidavits of numbers of our citizens-both Democrat and Republican. We, ourself, together with many other citizens, were prisoners with the rebels. We were charged with being a Union Spy, and Major Gilmor swore that he had seen us in the rebel camps of Virginia frequently, and in his usual gentlemanly style notified us that he would hang us "by Goo." Others were charged with bushwhacking. We were all re-leased on parole. So would need and myon have been had they been prisoners. Further remark is unnecessary. The statement of Reed having been forced into the rebel service is so utterly false and groundless, that no sane man, knowing the particulars, could, for a moment, give it credence. MORAL OBLIQUITY .- The moral . eputation of our town has been sadly marred, ever since the incarceration of the Crouse murderthe members of the Reed family may not be objectionable, as long as there is no probability of the prisoners attempting to escape, though they ought not to be permitted without the presence of the sheriff or his deputy. But that the jail should be kept as an open house for the holding of levees by the prison. ers, and that citizens of the town should de liberately, and with parade and show, visit it for the purpose of paying their respects to and lionizing the prisoners and entertaining them with music, &c., is an insult to any mor al and law abiding community, and they who thus make a parade of their contempt for the ordinary observances of civilized, moral and christian communities, exhibit an unenviable degree of moral depravity. Such conduct, on CROUSE FUND.—The annexed sums have degree of moral deplaced, the part of those making pretensions of mortune deplaced the part of those making pretensions of mortune deplaced the part of those making pretensions of mort been received since our last. Even their friends were ashamed of them. They brought little, if anything, in the edible line to the meeting; but you may be sure they did justice to the supplies better people had provided. Of course we found no fault with them for that. No doubt they were hungry, and had plenty of storage capacity, and as there was plenty to eat, we saw no reason who ency should not do so. And they did eat, as if they thought it not only a political, but a moral and religious duty. I believe they could eat an ox, tripes and all, for din ner, pick their teeth with his horns, and ther "go the whole hog," for supper. After din ner, they seemed to feel pretty good, as usual. One of them felt "so good" one time, a good while ago, that he is said to have declared he 'didn't know whether he was in heaven, or' -where the frost don't lie long. Then they oured a jug of whiskey, with which they were rovided, into themselves; but not having reserved room for the whiskey in the lower story, and their heads being empty, the spirits took possession thereof, finding soft and roomy apartments. When the whiskey got settled in their heads, they commenced abusing the people. First they insulted and struck a gray headed gentleman who had served his country faithfully in the old 6th Corps; and when they found they could not abuse him with impunity, they insulted another gentleman. Then they went so far as to strike two other Union gentlemen; but these two Union men, having the spirit of old Adam, and Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in them, got a little rough, and gave them a few good, old fashioned thumps, and turned them kind of bottom upward; when, it is supposed, a little sense found its way along their back bones into their heads, for after that they behaved pretty well.

I didn't see any more bad behavior of them, only one weak minded fellow tried once or twice to disturb Mr. ROLLINS in his oration Poor devil! he might as well try to disturb the flow of the Mississippi, or of Niagara, as to try his hand on Mr. ROLLINS.

In conclusion, I may say, we had a good time of it; but I wondered at the Union men for being so easy on the copperheads. I think a white man ought to have his rights; I think a "nigger" ought to have his rights, and I think even a poor "Cop." ought to have his rights, too. I always counsel kindness and moderation; but there is a point beyond which forbearance ceases to be a virtue. I wouldn't want a man to "wallop" a poor "Cop." for everything; but I look at it in this way: "If a "Cop," should hit me on one side of the head, and not strike too hard, recollect; I don't think I ought to rear up and be for fight right off, for may be he did it accidentally; so I would turn him the other side of the head, and if he didn't strike me on that, why I would say right at once, "bully for you,"ers in the county jail, by the constant visits mistake, wasn't it? But if he should strike me on that side, too, then I would think he the criminals therein confined. The visits of "wamus' and "jacket" an din about five min utes less than no time, mount him with the ut most alacrity, and by sundry and divers good thumps, well and duly administered, give him such an old fashioned thrashing as would make him a warning to all his friends and fellow citizens.
