THE LAST REVIEW.
BY MRS. E. J. BURGESS.
Twenty-one miles of boys in blue,
Sixty abreast in their last review,
Now grandly the columns stretch away,
In the cloudless light of this sweet May day.
Onward in rank and file they come,
To the cheering beat of the victors' drum.

Wearied, scared, and worn they be,
But a prouder host you will never see,
Their faded banners, riddled with balls,
But floating triumphantly all,
Never again in the world's sunlight,
Shall the Nations look on a grander sight.

No more till the Christian army stands,
Whose warriors shall gather on every land,
For a last review on the other shore,
Their life-long battles and marches o'er,
Will be marshalled like this victor's band,
Crowned with the glory that victors wear.

Let the heads of the nation bow as they pass,
And scatter with flowers the dewy grass,
As their gleaming weapons flash in the sun,
Remember the deeds of valor done.
How that solid column of human breasts
Was hared to the storm, for the nation's rest.

Then beat the drum for the last reveille,
The echoes of the strife are growing still,
With a conquering tread the heroes come,
Back to the dear old sights of home.

But alas! the army of countless dead,
We shall list in vain for their coming tread,
Full forty miles of our noble brave,
Sixty abreast, are in their graves,
As their cheers ring for the living host,
Remember the heroes loved and lost.

And think of the maimed and wasted band,
Seeking the homes of this stricken land,
For whom the brightness of life is o'er,
Whose feet are wearying the other shore,
Remnants of manhood scarce so strong,
Those cannot march in the gallant throng.

Then hail! all hail to the boys in blue,
Gathered to-day for a last review,
Marching with floating banners back;
Scarcely with flowers their joyous track,
Their banners perchance are dark with scars,
Their worn feet seamed with crimson scars,
But kings and victors we crown to-day,
The war-scarred host, on their homeward way.

And I wonder, if down from the sweet repose
Which the soul of the martyred hero knows,
The Commander-in-chief looks down and sees
Those banners float in this earthly breeze,
And if in the calm of that world of bliss,
His spirit would still thrill at a scene like this!

ARKANSAS.
Reorganization in the State.—Statement of Hon. E. W. Gantt.

To the editor of the Chronicle.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31, 1865.—The reorganization in Arkansas has progressed quietly, and is a success. In the fall of 1863 the first meeting was held looking to a State Convention. In February, 1864, a convention was held. It adopted a State constitution abolishing slavery, repudiating the Confederate debt, and nullifying all the acts done by the Confederate authorities, except marriage certificates, acknowledgment of deeds, and a few other minor things. It proceeded to organize a provisional government by the appointment of Hon. Isaac Murphy, Governor, empowering him to order an election for a permanent government, and requiring him to submit to the people the constitution for approval or rejection. The election was so ordered, and a permanent government established, with his Excellency, Isaac Murphy, as Governor. The constitution as amended was adopted by a vote, in round numbers, of twelve thousand for and two hundred against it. The vote cast was near one-half the estimated voting population of the State, a little less than one-fourth of the vote of 1860, and but a few hundred less, if not equal, to the entire vote cast for secession in 1861.

This organization was of the people and spontaneous. It has been erroneously supposed that the Executive or the military government controlled it. I know personally to the contrary. Advocating in the fall of 1863 and the winter of 1864, the holding of a convention and the amendment of our Constitution abolishing slavery, for reasons stated in various speeches and letters, I had an opportunity to hear, as they passed, the views of the commander of the department, a brave and accomplished soldier, opposed our views on this point, it was deemed expedient by the friends of the measure that I should go to Washington and see what influences could be brought to bear upon General Sherman, the commander of the military government, and the submitted to his plan of reorganization, whereby an election was ordered, for the 28th March, 1864. In the meantime, advice reached me from home, informing me of the meeting and action of the Convention, among which was its order for the election on the 14th of March. I called at once on President Lincoln, and laid before him the views of the Convention, and the plan of reorganization, whereby an election was ordered, for the 28th March, 1864.
