Mrs. Hunt died within a few miles of the place of her birth. She was familiar with the early his-tory of her native country, and witnessed great changes in her own eventful life. She was a good woman, and for many years, a consistent mem-ber of the Prestyterian church. She retained her mental vigor until the last. Her views of relig-ious truth were remarkably clear, and her faith in Christ was as unfaltering as it was intelligent. About a year ago her house was entirely consum-ed, and therefore she lived in the midst of discom-forts, yei was submissive and patient. The last remark she made to the writer, in early autumn, was: "I house to go to a botter house before winter comes."
